

Mel Gibson, Hannukah Hero?

Posted At : September 14, 2011 2:46 PM | Posted By : Stefanie Gordon

Related Categories: racism, history, holidays, antisemitism

Yes, it's unfortunately true. Mel Gibson is teaming up with Warner Bros. to recreate the story of Hannukah for the silver screen. In honor of a new school year being upon (some of) us, let's take a short pop quiz of Gibson's latest venture.

Question #1: Mel Gibson can best be described as:

- A. A great equal rights champion
- B. A raging anti-Semite
- C. A lovable curmudgeon

Question #2: Upon hearing the news that he will be producing a movie on Judah Maccabee, the most common reaction from the Jewish community is:

- A. Nachas (aka Pride)
- B. Incredulity (are you #%*!? kidding me?!)
- C. Agreement that, yes, this does seem like an intellectually sound arrangement

Question #3: What do 'Basic Instinct', 'Showgirls', and the movie adaption of the story of Hannukah all have in common?

- A. All three share writer Joe Eszterhas
- B. All three share writer Joe Eszterhas
- C. No, really. They share the same writer. Meaning that for all we know, Judah Maccabee, pole dancers, and Sharon Stone will all share screen time.

Do you think Gibson will be able to pull it off?