THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March 21, 1945

Dear Mr. Kaplan:

Hearty congratulations to the Associated Jewish Philanthropies of Boston on the completion of fifty years of constructive service to the community.

The attainment of this notable milestone in good works will bring to mind all the fine things achieved in philanthropy during the past half century, whether in the field of health, recreation, or welfare. Methods change but the need for private social work continues. I trust therefore that increasing success may come to you and your associates in the decades that lie ahead.

Very sincerely yours,

Jacob J. Kaplan, Esq.,
President, Jewish Philanthropies,

“Look Back With Pride . . . Look Forward With Courage”

by JACOB J. KAPLAN

President, Associated Jewish Philanthropies of Boston

WE have in Boston three formal stages in the organized philanthropic life of the Jewish community. The first was inaugurated April 29, 1895 — fifty years ago — when the Federation of Jewish Charities was established to unite in a common fund-raising body the principal Jewish charitable agencies of that time. This is said to be the first occasion of the use in the United States of what we now know as the Community Chest.

The second began when the Federated Jewish Charities was established primarily to add joint planning to that of cooperative fund raising.

The third, in 1930, inaugurated as the present Associated Jewish Philanthropies, an expanded organization whose purpose as set forth in its charter was to “coordinate the activities of the Jewish philanthropic, educational, and communal organizations of Boston; to foster, develop, and encourage such agencies as will best promote the welfare of the community; to cooperate to its fullest extent with all non-Jewish groups engaged in a similar effort to the end that the Jewish contribution may enrich the cultural life, happiness, and well-being of the entire community.”

The choice of its name by the Associated Jewish Philanthropies is significant. The previous stages have emphasized charity — that is to say, alms giving or relief. The present stage emphasizes the Greek words from which the name was derived — love of man. But this concept of a union of the Jewish community by a feeling of love of and responsibility for the other members of the community was not novel — or conceived of for the first time. It was undoubtedly this same idea which had activated the small group who formed the Federation fifty years ago, namely, that one of the essentials of a strong community is its union on the basis of this communal and mutual responsibility. The small group who founded the Federation undoubtedly had that idea in mind, as well as that of economy in fund raising, which was their ostensible reason for getting together.

In the half century which has elapsed since 1895, we have seen great progress. One measure of this progress is the increase in the funds raised from the annual budget of $12,000 in 1895 to the $775,000, including $200,000 for postwar development, raised for local needs in the 1944-45 campaign, over and above $1,500,000 allotted for national, overseas, and other local needs. But, a more important accomplishment has been the welding together of the Jewish community of Boston as an effective and single instrument not only to relieve poverty, sickness, and distress, but also to insure that our youth, and indeed our adults, by stimulus and education become upright, self-respecting, and responsible Americans, proud of their right to be such, as well as true to their heritage and ideals as Jews. Through the years, the Associated Jewish Philanthropies and its predecessors have been a binding and leading force which has made the realization of this goal increasingly nearer.

It is, therefore, not strange that these same agencies should have played so important and, indeed, a leading part in all manifestations of communal activity, and have developed so many leaders among our community, of whom the late Louis E. Kirstein was so fine and noble an example.

We can thus look back with pride upon the accomplishment of the half-century which has passed, and look forward with courage and hope to the future which unrolls before us.

IN 1895 the Boston Jewish community created the Federation of Jewish Charities as a voluntary organization to coordinate the activities of the Jewish charitable societies, to improve their services, and to eliminate the haphazard raising of funds and the waste connected therewith. It not only was the first Jewish organization of its kind in this country but the forerunner, as well, of the Community Chest movement which has since become nation-wide.

The philanthropic endeavors of the Boston Jewish community, however, actually began in the decades preceding the Civil War, when the total Jewish population in all the United States was only 15,000 and Boston's Jewish community numbered about 150 families. Indeed, BACON'S DICTIONARY OF BOSTON, issued in 1883, stated that "a Hebrew was an unusual sight in Boston in 1840." Members of the community were deeply religious and, as is the traditional practice wherever Jewish people settle, they immediately established a house of worship. The first was Congregation Ohabei Shalom, founded in September 1842 and incorporated March 22, 1845. Some members withdrew and in 1854 founded Congregation Adath Israel, now known as Temple Israel. Members of Adath Israel and a women's society connected with that Congregation were the first to undertake a program for the care and relief of some of the needy Jews in the community. The presence of these relief bodies signaled that Boston Jewry was ready to do something to help their needy co-religionists.

It was not until 1864 that demands for financial relief upon the members of the Boston Jewish community began to be felt because by this time the community had grown to 1600 families, most of them from Germany. To meet this situation Nathan Strauss called a meeting on January 10, 1864, at Adath Israel Synagogue on Pleasant Street, in the South End, and with twenty-six other Jewish leaders of the community organized the United Hebrew Benevolent Association.

This was the foundation on which the Associated Jewish Philanthropies of Boston was built. It marked, too, the first attempt to establish a community agency "to grant temporary relief to the poor and helpless," for the welfare of Boston's Jewish people. The first officers of the UHBA were: Nathan Strauss, president; James Benari, vice president; Joseph Shoninger, treasurer; and, Charles M. Strauss, J. Phillips, Samuel Strauss, and Ferdinand Norden-schild, trustees.

The annual relief budget of the UHBA did not exceed $500 which was obtained from annual membership dues of three dollars and, in later years, was supplemented by the net proceeds of an annual charity ball. The first of these events was staged in 1869 in old Horticultural Hall, then located opposite the Old Granary Burial Grounds and netted $2,000 of which $1,000 was set aside by President Abraham Einstein as an emergency fund.

How UHBA Operated

Board members were assigned to meet once weekly to receive applications from those requiring assistance which was limited to two dollars per week. As a rule, the needy person called at the business place of the board member and there the applicant's situation was discussed and relief granted. The entire transaction was carried on in an informal manner, for everyone was acquainted with the people of the community.

This method of operation continued until 1876 when Mr. Einstein died and he was succeeded to the UHBA presidency by Jacob H. Hecht, a well-known merchant and a most generous citizen. Under Mr. Hecht's leadership the UHBA relief practices changed. At his suggestion Rabbis Solomon Schindler and Raphael Lasker were engaged to conduct investigations and to meet with relief applicants at a definite hour, three times each week, in an office given free of charge by E. W. Frank. Subsequently, the UHBA relief office moved to the Charity Building of the Overseers of the Poor of Boston, on Hawkins Street.

While these changes were welcome, they did not reduce the needs of the poor to whom the two-dollar relief grant provided little more than subsistence. Mrs. Lina Hecht, wife of Jacob H. Hecht, was sensitive to this situation and on December 5, 1878, she and a small group of her friends organized the Hebrew Women's Sewing Society, designed to supplement the relief given by the UHBA, particularly in providing the needy families with clothing and blankets.

The founding of the Hebrew Women's Sewing Society was a notable event in Jewish communal life, for it marked the emergence of women as an important factor in the philanthropic work of the community. It is significant that the efforts and interests of the Jewish women continued from that day to the present. The Women's Division of the Combined Jewish Appeal and the women's auxiliaries in the various societies today play a most important role in the successful operation of all our philanthropic endeavors.

Boston's Jewish welfare services assumed an institutional character for the first time in 1888. That year Leopold Morse, one of Boston's most respected citizens and philanthropists, and the first Jew from this vicinity to be elected to the U. S. House of Reprerepresentatives, purchased an estate in Mattapan and dedicated it to the use of the aged and of needy children. This endeavor was incorporated under the name of the Leopold Morse Home for Aged and Infirm Hebrews and Orphanage.

The Home — a thirty-two room mansion — was properly equipped with funds contributed by many Jews in the community. It had a salutary effect in reducing the number of orphaned children placed by the Commonwealth in non-Jewish foster homes, even though the combining in one institution of the aged and the children surely would not be considered sound social work practice today. The Home was also particularly helpful in preparing the children through a series of manual training programs to earn their living upon their discharge. It is worth noting that one of the first persons to interest himself in this phase of the Home's program was Louis E. Kirstein who had contributed twenty-five dollars in memory of his father, Edward Kirstein, "to encourage good behavior and scholarship" of these orphans. The Home was not founded under the UHBA auspices but the UHBA contributed $600 annually toward its support until May, 1895.

In 1889 the Hebrew Women's Sewing Society, then quartered in rooms over the Horace Partridge store on Hanover Street, launched on an expansion program. Members of the Society, by reason of their experience, were alive to the needs among immigrant girls of opportunities for training in cooking and sewing as well as religious instruction. Once again Mrs. Lina Hecht called on her friends and the same year organized the Hebrew Industrial School.

The School was first conducted in the Sewing Society's rooms but moved, consecutively, to the Baldwin Place Synagogue, to Allen Street in the West End, and, later, to 154 Charles Street. When the latter quarters became too small, "Aunt Lina," as Mrs. Hecht was affectionately known, gave the School a building at 22 Bowdoin Street. The School subsequently changed its name to Hecht Neighborhood House. In the beginning, instruction was given in the domestic arts and in "moral and religious" subjects. Later, an annual recreation program, known as "Poor Children's Parties," was added. This was the first recreational program under the aegis of a Jewish philanthropic agency and followed to some extent a similar endeavor which was then conducted by the late Mrs. James J. Storrow.

Miss Golde Bamber was director of the School from its very beginning and served continuously for forty years, until her retirement in 1930. During this period membership increased and the program had become diversified, offering, in addition, instruction in languages.

Ratshesky Benefactions

A few years after the founding of the Hebrew Industrial School, Mrs. Hecht and her associates realized that the girls and women with whom they came in contact needed an opportunity for rest and recreation in proper surroundings. As a result, another philanthropic venture — Country Week Camp Committee — came into existence.

This Committee arranged a special program, directed by the late Mrs. Nancy Spitz, enabling mothers and their children to spend a week's vacation at the seashore. Some of the women failed to benefit from the seashore vacation and the Committee at a later date obtained a vacation place in Canton. This phase of the Country Week program was abandoned but was resumed in 1917 through the benefactions of the late Hon. Abraham C. Ratshesky who established the Ratshesky Foundation which purchased an estate in Montserrat, Beverly, and which is still operated under the name of Country Week, as a summer camp for girls. Later, the Ratshesky Foundation bought an ap-

CONSTITUTION

OF THE FEDERATION OF JEWISH CHARITIES.

PREAMBLE.

WHEREAS, the Jewish charities of the City of Boston are now administered by a number of different organizations, each acting independently of the others, resulting in imperfect investigation and a duplication of charities, and believing that a union of interests for a common cause will tend to a more systematic administration of the charities, will avoid duplication and the making of paupers, will establish a more perfect system of investigation and registration, will render moral as well as material aid, and will receive a more generous support from the community; therefore be it

RESOLVED, that a federation be established, to be called THE FEDERATION OF JEWISH CHARITIES OF BOSTON.

Objects.

The objects of this society shall be:

To secure the harmonious action of the different Jewish Charities of Boston, by establishing a central bureau for the reception and registration of all applications for relief.

To place the results of such investigations at the disposal of the members of this association.

To provide means for furthering the charitable work of its members, and for such other purposes as will tend to raise the needy beyond the need of relief.

propriate site in Essex which has been conducted since 1929 as a boys' camp, known as Camp Chebacco. Following Mr. Ratshesky's death, Country Week and Camp Chebacco were given to the Associated Jewish Philanthropies.

In the late eighties, the pogroms and persecutions in Eastern Europe, particularly in Czarist Russia, forced the Jews to flee. Thousands came to America with a large number settling in Boston whose Jewish population had grown to 5,000 in 1890. The Russian immigrants in Boston were convinced that the pogroms would continue and foresaw a still greater influx of their fellow countrymen. Moving to help the future newcomers the immigrants prevailed upon the community to create in 1891 the Benoth Israel Sheltering Home on Cooper Street and the Charitable Burial Association.

Samuel L. Dana, who recently observed his 75th birthday, Morris L. Morrison, Abraham Moss, Joseph Rudnick, and others were instrumental in the founding of these two societies. It was with their help that the Sheltering Home obtained a new building at 6 North Russell Street where some of the present day agencies of the Associated are now located.

Plight of Immigrants

The stream of immigrants into Boston produced unprecedented demands upon the Jewish community and the charitable organizations. Every new ship docking in Boston brought new immigrants, most of whom had to be housed, fed, clothed, and for whom employment had to be found. Many of the non-Jewish agencies, and, in particular, the Boston Provident Aid Society, were extremely helpful. This marked the beginning of a cordial and cooperative relationship with the nonsectarian agencies — a relationship which continues to this day.

However, none of the existing agencies were as important in easing the suffering of the Russian immigrants as the Free Employment Bureau of the Baron de Hirsch Committee. It was founded in Boston in 1892, as a result of the generosity of the London philanthropist, Baron Maurice de Hirsch. The Boston branch was opened with an initial contribution by the Committee of $3,000 to which the Boston Jewish community donated an additional $4,000. Jacob H. Hecht was its first chairman; Abraham P. Spitz, vice chairman; and Abraham C. Ratshesky, treasurer.

The Free Employment Committee helped hundreds become occupationally adjusted through its free employment service and its vocational training programs. It also encouraged immigrants to settle in surrounding rural areas and was especially effective in preventing the deportation of immigrants who were brought to the attention of immigration authorities.

By 1894, Boston's Jewish community totalled 20,000 of whom 14,000 were immigrants — most of them lacking adequate means for self-support. It is no surprise, therefore, that the Jewish charitable agencies became literally stormed with calls for help. The agencies, unable to meet adequately the frantic calls for assistance, ventured forth into one independent emergency appeal after another.

Boston's Jewish leaders responded generously. But they were constantly harassed by individual appeals from the newcomers. This condition ultimately awakened the business people of the community to the realization that there was much duplication of relief giving, that the Boston charitable societies should be coordinated, and, above all, that they should be more adequately financed and more soundly administered.

In 1894, therefore, the leaders of the community once again gathered to discuss a communal problem. Many solutions were proposed. But none was acceptable — because every agency representative feared that amalgamating into one organization would cause each individual agency to lose its autonomy.

EDWARD E. NORTON, First Secretary

ABRAHAM C. RATSHESKY, President
1909-1918

The Federation Is Born

That year, while these discussions were taking place, Abraham P. Spitz came forward with a solution. Mr. Spitz proposed a federation modelled after our own Federal constitution. This proposal was accepted and in April 29, 1895, the Federation of Jewish Charities of Boston was organized. The constitution provided, among other things, that the Federation would exercise the function of raising funds and of registering relief applicants. Member agencies were obligated not to solicit for funds except with the approval of the Federation's board of trustees.

The constitution provided also that the Federation was to establish a Central office for registration of relief applicants, and to engage a superintendent on a full-time basis as well as other "agents." The superintendent was to take charge of the Central office, supervise the staff, receive and investigate all applications and organize a corps of volunteers to serve as advisers. To keep constantly informed on the work of the agencies, the superintendent was also required to visit at regular intervals all the charitable agencies in Boston, both affiliated and not affiliated.

The first officers of the Federation were: Jacob H. Hecht, president; Godfrey Morse and Lehman Pickert, vice presidents; Max Friedman, treasurer; Edward E. Norton, clerk, and Max E. Wyzanski, campaign treasurer. The Board members were: Jacob Berwin, Israel Cohen, Rev. Charles Fleischer, Mrs. Jacob H. Hecht, Isaac Kaffenburgh, Abraham Moss, Harris Naiherseg, Isaac Peavy, Silas Peavy, Abraham P. Spitz, Mrs. Abraham P. Spitz, Henry B. Spitz, Ferdinand Strauss, and Mrs. Charles Weil. For its first superintendent, the Federation engaged Rabbi Schindler who continued in the dual role as superintendent of the UHBA. Original constituent societies were the United Hebrew Benevolent Association, the Hebrew Women's Sewing Society, Leopold Morse Home for Aged and Infirm Hebrews and Orphanage, the Free Employment Bureau, and Charitable Burial Society.

Other Cities Follow Suit

"Federation" became the talisman in other Jewish communities and similar organizations began to appear throughout the country. The era preceding the creation of the Boston Federation was important from the standpoint of social work because it saw the development of varying types of services to meet the needs of the times. Institutional care for the aged and orphaned, for example, came into being with the Leopold Morse Home; Country Week marked the advent of recreation in a philanthropic setting; health and employment services were created; transient services were provided; women emerged as a dynamic force in community life; and, most important, an attempt at coordination of a community charitable program was successful.

New agencies came into being at the turn of the century, increasing the health and welfare resources of a growing Jewish community. In 1899 the Helping Hand Temporary Home for Destitute Jewish Children was organized, acquired its own building on Fort Avenue, Roxbury, two years later. In 1902 Mount Sinai Hospital Society opened the first Jewish outpatient clinic, first at 104 Chambers Street and later to more spacious quarters on Staniford Street. That Mount Sinai met a definite need was shown by the fact that within three years patients made 6952 clinical visits. Another agency that carried on important work during this period was the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, established in 1902 and incorporated two years later.

The first instance of agency merging, to eliminate duplication of work and unnecessary expense, took place in 1907, when the Temporary Home and the Leopold Morse Home combined their activities into an agency known as the Home for Jewish Children. A site was purchased for the construction of a new building at Canterbury and Austin Streets, Dorchester, and in 1911 the Home for Jewish Children was dedicated. This was an historic event, for it marked the opening of the first building especially erected for Jewish charitable purposes in New England.

Helping Chelsea Fire Victims

Reference may be made here to the assistance given by the Federation to the victims of the historic Chelsea fire in 1908. Working in cooperation with a State committee under the direction of Mr. Ratshesky, the Federation immediately placed all of its resources at the disposal of the homeless victims. The Federation provided milk, food, clothing, shelter and medical services. Max Mitchell, Federation superintendent, along with Jacob de Haas and Leopold J. Lyons, then in charge of the YMHA, founded in 1881, opened a special office at 80 Charles Street, Boston, from which additional help was rendered the Chelsea people. It is pleasing to note that while in those days the Federation did not furnish aid outside of Boston, today the Associated is developing an extension program in cooperation with the cities and towns in the Metropolitan area.

From the standpoint of social work progress, the fight for the placement of Jewish children in foster homes assumed monumental importance in 1907. That year Simon Vorenberg became the president of the UHBA and launched a crusade against the placement of Jewish State wards in non-Jewish homes. Mr. Vorenberg succeeded in having a special worker engaged to find proper Jewish homes where children should be placed. The success of Mr. Vorenberg's endeavors are reflected in the 1916 report of the UHBA which stated that of 179 Jewish children in the care of the State, 124 were placed in Jewish homes.

Quest For Better Service

The year 1914 is unforgettable in the annals of local philanthropic progress. It not only was the year that marked the golden anniversary of the UHBA — observed with a dazzling charity ball in the modern Horticultural Hall building — but it was the year in which communal leaders once more began to realize that the Jewish people could do a better job than it was doing in helping the needy.

It was a year, too, which saw the emergence of a new concept of social service planning and administration by men who had heretofore not been participants in the local charitable endeavors. But what they lacked in actual experience they more than made up by their energy and vision. All great credit, however, should be given to those who had been the leaders up to this time, many of whom have already been named.

To them should be added the names of Joseph M. Herman, Isaac Rosnosky, "Big" Louis Hecht, Nathan Pinanski, Louis Pokroisky, Gustavus I. Peavy, Abraham Koshland, Sophie Strauss, William Bloom, Hennie Liebman, and others who worked faithfully to build a solid philanthropic foundation for Boston.

Among those now coming to the fore as comparatively new workers for the Federation may be mentioned Louis E. Kirstein, David A. Ellis, Carl Dreyfus, Frances Stern, Sadie R. Cohen, Edward J. Brody, Isabel F. Hyams, Judge A. K. Cohen, Albert W. Kaffenburgh, Albert A. Ginzberg and Judge David A. Lourie. They, and others, prevailed upon President Ratshesky to appoint a committee to study the entire charitable program of the city. Mr. Ratshesky readily acceded to this request and appointed a "Welfare Committee" with Judge Cohen as chairman, and comprising as members Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, Isabel F. Hyams, Frances Stern, and Max E. Wyzanski. Investigations made in behalf of the Committee were conducted, to a large extent, by Miss Hyams and Miss Stern who spent several months studying the local conditions.

In February, 1916, the Welfare Committee made its final report to a full meeting of the Board of Trustees. It recommended drastic changes not only in administrative procedures but in the entire charitable organization. The report called for closing of Mount Sinai Hospital because of its unsuitable quarters; for a new constitution; and for the appointment of an expert in social service planning to serve as a director for all the constituent agencies. It also advocated the establishment of a social service department to be staffed by trained social workers.

When the Welfare Committee chairman informed the Board that a minimum of $150,000 would be required to carry out the recommendations, those who had been active in fund raising for the Federation stated that the sum could not be raised in Boston and moved that the report be tabled. Fortunately, there was one man present who felt differently.

ALBERT W. KAFFENBURGH, President
1925-1927

That man was Louis E. Kirstein.

Mr. Kirstein urged the acceptance of the report and flatly declared that the Boston Jewish community could raise the required amount if the fund raising campaign were properly organized. Thereupon, Mr. Ratshesky asked Mr. Kirstein to serve as chairman of such a campaign committee and he accepted, naming Leon Strauss as the campaign director. Mr. Strauss scrapped the antiquated fund raising procedures, introduced the techniques of the Liberty Bond drive, organized a veritable army of volunteer workers, and extended coverage throughout the city. The outcome of the 1917 campaign was not the $150,000 minimum, but a heretofore unheard of sum of $250,000!

Community Social Planning

Having obtained the financial support, the Federation almost immediately began to enact the recommendations of the Welfare Committee. As its first move it engaged Morris D. Waldman of New York, then, as now, enjoying an enviable and national reputation in social service, as the executive director. Then the unwieldy Federation structure was evolved into a modernized organization known as the Federated Jewish Charities of Boston.

Mr. Waldman's first major step as executive director was to undertake an intensive study of the Jewish community as well as the social agencies. He found an excess of relief-giving agencies and a total lack of community-wide planning of the Jewish social, health, welfare, and recreational agencies. He proposed that district service centers be established in each of the populous Jewish neighborhoods and that each center should service all the needs — relief and recreational — of the district in which the center was located. It was his hope that by such integration of the life of a district neighborhood there would be an expression by each local community of its thoughts and needs — which was lacking under the old Federation. Mr. Waldman also urged that each district center be in charge of a resident social worker and under the supervision of a volunteer committee composed of representatives of that particular district.

ABRAHAM K. COHEN, President

In 1918 Mr. Waldman, having made his imprint on Jewish community life in Boston, left to do war work. He was succeeded by Dr. Maurice B. Hexter of Cincinnati who was thoroughly trained in social work. Under his direction District Service centers became operative in Roxbury, Dorchester, East Boston, the West End and the South End.

The gradual expansion of District Service naturally caused a corresponding decline in the activities of the UHBA and the Sewing Society, which ultimately became inactive.

Additional changes also came about as the response to more integration in the city's agency life. As a result of Mr. Waldman's recommendations that Jewish education — a field in which the Boston Section of the Council of Jewish Women rendered important service — be evaluated, Louis Hurwich was asked to study the conditions related to Hebrew education. He uncovered in 1917, many inadequacies, such as poor school quarters, low standards, etc. To help remedy the situation there was created the Association of Jewish Hebrew Schools. The Association was followed by the founding of the Bureau of Jewish Religious Schools, which merged with the Association into the Bureau of Jewish Education in 1920.

Upon the recommendations of the Bureau of Jewish Education, the Hebrew Teachers College was founded in 1920. Since its opening in 1921, the College has received subsidies from the Federated Jewish Charities and from the Associated Jewish Philanthropies.

Membership in the Federated was increasing. The Jewish Prison Aid Society, the Jewish Maternity Clinic, the Jewish Children's Aid Society, the Jewish Big Brother Association, United Moeth Chitim Association, and Country Week, all heretofore independent agencies, became affiliated. In 1923 the Benoth Israel Sheltering Home became a member and in 1928 the YMHA. The next year Hebrew Free Loan Society joined.

Years of Crisis

But the 1920's were trying times for the Federated. The advent of additional agencies entailed additional expenditures and deficits accrued. Despite the lush financial conditions in the country the Jewish charitable organizations were taxed almost to the breaking point.

Yet, it was during these years that the Jewish community was contributing generously to the development of other projects. The people supported the erection of numerous fine Jewish school buildings and temples. And they constructed, too, a new Beth Israel Hospital which has become a veritable monument to our people and to the city. The new health institution, which is now regarded as one of the finest in the country, was the outgrowth of the old Beth Israel Hospital then located on Townsend Street in Roxbury. The old BI building was sold to the Greater Boston Bickur Cholim Hospital, now known as the Jewish Memorial Hospital for the chronic sick. Both institutions became members of the Federated in 1929.

Dr. Selekman Takes The Helm

That year the Federated lost its second executive director. Dr. Hexter resigned to accept a position with the Jewish Agency for Palestine. He was succeeded by Dr. B. M. Selekman of New York, who had attained a national reputation with the Russell Sage Foundation and for his work as director of the American Office of the Hebrew University.

Dr. Selekman arrived in October, 1929, almost on the eve of the stock market crash. He came at a time when conditions within and outside of the Federated were distressing. The number of contributors and the number of contributions had reached a new low. Leaders of the Federated felt that something had to be done to arouse the community to its obligations to the poverty-stricken people.

As a first move, the corporate structure of the Federated was altered. The word "charities" was dropped from the organization's name and instead the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, incorporated April 4, 1930, became successor of the Federated Jewish Charities. It is interesting to note that Mr. Spitz, who conceived the Federation in 1895 and helped draw up its constitution, also participated in drawing up the new AJP constitution. Constituent agencies of the Federated became constituent agencies of the AJP.

MAX E. WYZANSKI
*Campaign Treasurer

Aims of AJP

The purposes of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, so well set forth in the incorporation papers, were "to establish and maintain a Jewish Community Chest; to coordinate the activities of the Jewish philanthropic and educational and communal organizations of Boston; to foster, develop and encourage such agencies as will best promote the welfare of the community; to cooperate to its fullest extent with all non-Jewish groups engaged in a similar effort to the end that the Jewish contribution may enrich the cultural life, happiness and well being of the entire community." For legal reasons the Federated, now an inactive body, has retained its corporate existence.

Mr. Kirstein, president of the Federated from 1922 to 1924, was asked to become president of the new Associated, and, happily, agreed to serve. His character, vision, ability, and generosity piloted the organization through the trying years until his death in December, 1942. He was succeeded by Judge Cohen who agreed to serve for one year, at the end of which he was succeeded by Judge Jacob J. Kaplan.

Having brought to his position a deep appreciation of the value of social research, it was natural that Dr. Selekman should advocate a complete and thorough analysis of the entire Jewish scene in Boston. He recommended that a survey be undertaken by a competent group from outside of Boston, so that an impartial and objective viewpoint would be brought out. As a result, the Bureau of Jewish Social Research of New York, since merged into the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, was asked to undertake such a survey. The study was conducted by specialists in every phase of social service, health, and recreation. When it was finished the Trustees received monumental reports, known as the Jewish Communal Survey of Boston.

Findings of the Experts

The Survey showed that the District Service Plan had become practically outmoded, due chiefly to a shifting of the Jewish population from the South End, East Boston, and the West End. It was, therefore, recommended that District Service centers be abolished, which in turn meant an end to the joint administration of family welfare and group work. The Survey also recommended that there be established a family welfare agency, which should specialize in case work treatment and that all agencies who dealt in family problems should cooperate with the new agency. It called for the creation of a child welfare agency responsible for the coordination of all child welfare work, and for the dissolution of the Home for Jewish Children, thereby abolishing institutional care in favor of foster home placement. Finally, the Survey urged that all recreational and cultural activities be organized through the Hecht Neighborhood House and the Boston YMHA.

Following the presentation of the Survey findings to the Board of the Associated, a special committee — the Committee on Plans and Scope of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies on the Boston Communal Survey — was appointed to review the recommendations. This committee, comprising Henry Silberman, chairman; A. K. Cohen, Miss Isabel F. Hyams, Miss Sarah A. Hyams, Hon. J. J. Kaplan, Robert M. Morrison, F. Frank Vorenberg, and Miss Frances Stern deliberated for one year. It reported in 1931, after thorough study that it heartily endorsed the recommendations of the Survey. "We see now," the Plans and Scope Committee concluded, "how to improve and strengthen our agencies in themselves, as well as integrate them as parts of the whole Associated. Boston Jewry wants nothing less than the best for its social service."

Thus, in 1934, the Home for Jewish Children was closed and that organization, along with the Jewish Children's Bureau established in 1918, merged into the Jewish Child Welfare Association, thereby centralizing the child care activities in the community. Also organized at this time was the Jewish Family Welfare Association. Two years later Hecht Neighborhood House, no longer serving a Jewish community in the West End, moved into the spacious building of the Home for Jewish Children located on American Legion Highway, Dorchester, after it was remodelled to suit the needs of a community center.

The administration of the Associated and its constituent agencies in the thirties was carried on under great financial stress. The 1930 campaign produced sufficient revenue for the normal needs of the agencies. In the next five years, however, the AJP income dropped by one third of the 1930 level — an income that was inadequate to meet the minimum requirements of the social service program as well as the operating expenses of the nineteen agencies. Professional, administrative and clerical personnel suffered during this period of the depression despite numerous retrenchments.

Happily, in 1935, giving again pointed upward, and by 1939 renewed generous support of Boston's philanthropic agencies enabled the AJP to embark on a pay-as-you-go basis and to clear up staggering deficits that had mounted during the distressing years.

Helping Refugees — CJA

Just as the influx of immigrants in their flight from the persecutions in Czarist Russia was a factor in the creation of the Federation, nearly half a century later the problem of the refugees from Hitler Germany caused a major change in the local communal structure. In 1937 there was created the Greater Boston United Jewish Campaign to meet the refugee, Palestine and national needs. The next year the Boston Committee for Refugees was organized under the auspices of the Associated as an affiliate of the National Refugee Service.

Under its chairman, Walter H. Bieringer, the Boston Committee for Refugees did yeoman service in helping the refugees reestablish themselves in this country. It assumed full responsibility for their financial support, health and social welfare. It provided the refugees with jobs and, through the Vocation Service, with new opportunities and training that enabled these newcomers to make important contributions, both as soldiers of production and as soldiers on the battlefields. Since the upswing in employment, refugees in need of social services are helped by the Jewish Family Welfare Association.

Boston's first United Jewish Campaign was conducted in 1937. However, the UJC was not the only one to which the Jewish people were asked to contribute. There was the Associated Jewish Philanthropies campaign which they had to support. Now, the conduct of these separate campaigns, one in the Spring, the other in the Fall, proved extremely irritating. They were a strain on the volunteers who worked almost on a year-round basis and on the contributors, who were becoming annoyed by the frequency of solicitations. In addition, there was a duplication of campaign expenditures.

To remedy this condition both appeals were merged in 1940 into the Combined Jewish Appeal, a move that made Boston the first major Jewish community in the country which raised its funds for local, national and overseas needs in a single campaign. The wisdom of this merger was reflected in the 1944 Combined Jewish Appeal when the Boston community and its surrounding cities and towns raised $2,250,000.

Shortly after the outbreak of World War II, the Boston Jewish community began to focus attention on the needs of Jewish servicemen both here and elsewhere. As a result, the Combined Jewish Appeal has been contributing substantially to the National Jewish Welfare Board, and, in Boston to the JWB Army and Navy Club on Commonwealth Avenue, thus assisting in the maintaining of the highest type of recreational, cultural and spiritual opportunities for the men and women in uniform.

Planning For Peacetime

Aware of the changing conditions in the community, the Associated at the suggestion of President Cohen, appointed last year a new Plans and Scope Committee to study present and future needs and to evaluate the work of each constituent agency. Casper M. Grosberg was named general chairman. The various subcommittees launched on an intensive study of every phase of service. By reason of a preliminary report by the Subcommittee on Youth there was recently created the Jewish Centers Association of Greater Boston, an over-all planning agency bringing to Boston the most advanced thinking in the group work field. Also, as a result of the Plans and Scope Committee's studies of communal needs, camping facilities are being expanded and the total camping program is becoming coordinated. Other subcommittees are studying community health problems, education, family service, and, most important, the needs of returning veterans.

Today, as our Nation approaches a new era, the Jewish community can reflect with pride upon its humanitarian achievements and contributions. Today, too, the Jewish community, through the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, maintains a network of agencies which constantly strive to serve the multiple needs, from health to education, of a Greater Boston community of 130,000.

It is no exaggeration to say that Boston is now one of the leading cities of the country in the growth and development of its philanthropic activities. Our Jewish community stands forth as an example of the realization and fulfillment of its communal duties and obligations.

May this spirit continue forever!

Bread Alone Is Not Enough

by CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, President
Greater Boston Community Fund

CONGRATULATIONS from the Greater Boston Community Fund to the Associated Jewish Philanthropies on the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of its organization. As a forerunner of this type of federation, the AJP has not only blazed trails for those organizations that came afterwards but has continued the age-old Jewish tradition of caring for the diverse needs of its own people. Fifty years is a short time in the history of the Jews, but it is a long and significant time in the history of community movements to meet human need.

Probably no movement of the past quarter century has had a more profound effect on the life of a community and its people than the growth of community organizations to meet community social and health problems. A Community Fund or a federation of social agencies is a far cry from the days of the Good Samaritan; yet it embodies the same spirit applied to the complicated situations of modern industrial life and applied with the same understanding of the need of man for more than bread.

Social and health work have made amazing strides in the past fifty years. The need of a child for a home of his own and for loving care from parents — his own or foster parents — has been recognized today as a fundamental need, and child care programs are based on meeting this need first. Scientific advances in the field of medicine have brought about major changes in our health work with greater emphasis on prevention of disease and the preservation of health. Great strides are being made in the field of mental health. Likewise, services to families in trouble have seen great changes. Gone long ago are the days when a basket of food was considered the answer to the economic and health problems of a family. Today an earnest effort is made to determine the causes of family difficulties and to help each individual family to help itself out of its troubles. The recognition of the need of young people living in industrial communities for wholesome activities and guidance has brought about the development of a whole series of new services which would amaze our forefathers.

Much of this progress has been due to a realization that the whole individual is important, that just to provide food for a family is not enough if there is no job for the breadwinner, but to provide a job is not the answer if the breadwinner is incapable of taking the job. While unemployment is a major serious problem in our country today, its solution is not the answer to all problems of health and individual welfare. Poverty, disease, despair are not merely economic problems. They are also problems of individual capacity, of environment and opportunity.

Along with this greater understanding of the need of the whole individual has come an intensive development of specialization, so that more and more knowledge has been gained in special fields of social and health welfare. Our great advances in the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis would never have been made without intensive specialized research on that one disease. Yet, the resources of a whole community are needed in order to provide necessary specialized treatment for the individual and to prevent the disease from developing.

It was inevitable that the combination of a welfare philosophy which considered all the needs of an individual plus the necessity for specialization in order to meet these needs would lead to the federation of social and health agencies within an area. That the Jewish agencies in Boston undertook this federation fifty years ago reflects the foresight and wisdom of its leaders. Further, the successful organization and development of the AJP gave to the rest of the country valuable experience on which to form similar organizations.

The Community Fund movement, only thirty years old in the country, and ten years old in Greater Boston, owes much to these early federations of social and health agencies. Though the primary objective at the time of the organization of many Community Funds was the financing of private social and health work, this objective has long since broadened to include the wise distribution of funds raised and social planning for the community as a whole.

The Fund movement has spread in the past thirty years to include every major city in the nation. Last year $132,000,000 was raised by 700 Funds to take care of home needs, and in addition $80,000,000 was raised by Funds for special war services. Millions of people made voluntary contributions ranging from a few pennies to thousands of dollars; and thousands gave freely of their energies and time to help raise and distribute this money. While there has been a national federation of these local community funds to provide services they all need and to give national prominence to their campaigns, yet each fund has maintained its own independence and is free to organize and operate according to the needs of its own community. Its success depends on the leadership within the community and the understanding and generosity of the people in that community.

While the record of the Fund movement in terms of dollars raised is impressive in itself, probably its greatest contribution to a community has been the consolidation of all forces in the community interested in the general welfare. As Fund agencies give service to all in need without discrimination, so the Fund movement has bound the whole community together in one great activity for the common good. The Greater Boston Community Fund by joining in one great effort all major social and health organizations, Catholic, Jewish, Protestant and non-sectarian, and by including the large Greater Boston area with fifty-six cities and towns has created, in less than ten years, a spirit within this Greater Boston community that has revitalized it — a spirit that looks to the general community good and the good of each individual within it.

While the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, because of its early development and its need to raise large sums of money to help Jews outside Greater Boston, has conducted its own money-raising campaign, it has at the same time cooperated closely with the Fund and helped effectively in the Fund campaigns. The terrible sufferings of the Jews throughout the world in the last ten years have aroused the deep sympathy of the people of this community, and the great generosity of the local Jewish community in contributing large sums to alleviate the sufferings of their fellows has been greatly admired.

Many serious problems face us in Greater Boston in the next few years, problems of postwar adjustments, governmental relationships, broken families, public health, and many other problems that will be created by the stresses and strains of the postwar world. Their solution will require vision, cooperation, courage, and initiative. They will demand the highest type of leadership — the kind that is developed by such movements as the Associated Jewish Philanthropies and the Community Fund. We of the Fund not only congratulate the Associated Jewish Philanthropies for its accomplishments of the past fifty years, but we are confident that the Associated Jewish Philanthropies will continue to maintain its fine record of service and will blaze new trails in the future for the health and happiness of the Jewish people in Greater Boston and the community in general.

The Eyes of the World Are Upon Us

by LOUIS H. SALVAGE, General Chairman Combined Jewish Appeal

AS the remains of European Jewry rise from their graves and as our men and women return from the armed forces to pick up the threads of civilian life, we American Jews — free citizens of a great democracy — know that our obligations are clear-cut. We must do everything possible to help these thousands return to a life of normalcy, health, and contentment.

The Jewish community of Greater Boston has always been at the forefront of humanitarianism. Our Jewish people in this city were the first to organize into a federation for the common good of the less fortunate members within our midsts. Our Jewish community was the first to create a COMBINED Jewish appeal in order that every penny raised will do its work.

Our co-religionists on the Continent — those that survived Hitler's systematized program of extermination — look longingly, pitifully, and hopefully to us American Jews who have enjoyed the freedom and security of democracy. They are too weak to cry out for help. But a Jewish heart always responds even at the faintest wail. This has been a tradition with the Jew. This is a tradition that we will maintain now, more than ever.

American Jewry must redouble its efforts to render new life to the thousands of men and women whom Germany has starved, tortured, abused for the past twelve years. American Jewry must help restore to Jewish life the thousands of orphaned children now living in non-Jewish homes and being reared in traditions and faiths other than Jewish. Those European Jews who can not and will not return to the lands where they experienced nothing but brutality must get an opportunity to live again.

Two great centers of Jewish life remain in this world — America and Palestine. Mention of Palestine brings to mind the fact that one of the most glorious periods of Jewish history was written in and by Palestine in the past decade when Eretz Israel has been the true haven for oppressed Jewry.

Today, despite the restrictions on immigration, Palestine still stands as the land of hope for many thousands of European Jews. Palestine is ready to welcome with open hearts those who come. We American Jews must be prepared to help Palestine maintain this position.

Here in Greater Boston we have an obligation of paramount importance. This is a debt that we, as Americans, must meet in full and as quickly as possible — our debt to the men and women who have fought for freedom. They and they alone have made it possible for us to carry on this enterprise known as the Combined Jewish Appeal. Without their sacrifices in freedom's cause, voluntary giving, voluntary agencies, voluntary community planning and service would have been impossible.

To these men and women we must bring new opportunities. We must see to it that they receive, where necessary, the best possible guidance to resume their interrupted lives. We must be ready to help veterans desiring it by providing them with services that will enable them to readjust themselves more expeditiously to civilian life.

For the veterans and for the civilians, we must create new and adequate recreational and cultural facilities. For them and their families, too, we must provide finer medical resources and better Jewish educational institutions.

We owe it to the men who have fought our battle, we owe it to those who have died in defense of freedom, and we owe it to America and to our people to develop a community wherein the needs of all are met. Only when we have a community that is aware of the needs of the members living therein can we say that we have met our responsibility, which is the price we are paying for freedom.

At this present writing, the exact amount of our substantially increased goal for the 1945 Combined Jewish Appeal in Greater Boston has not been definitely determined. Whatever the goal, I am confident that "we can, we will, we must" meet it.

★ Greetings ★

MORRIS D. WALDMAN, first Executive Director of the Federated Jewish Charities of Boston, now Vice Chairman of the Executive Committee of the American Jewish Committee.

... It is proper, indeed even important, to mark the fiftieth anniversary of the Boston Federation and to celebrate it joyously. The Federation is a symbol of the very civilization which the United Nations are desperately striving to defend and preserve, a symbol of the beneficent institutions which the enemy is seeking to destroy. And it is vital that the services it renders through its affiliated agencies be continued not only for the concrete help to those it serves but as living evidence of the dignity of human personality which the enemy's philosophy negates and has arrogantly and fiendishly attempted to suppress and enslave... I look back with joy to the great privilege afforded to me, twenty-five years ago, to take an active part in the reorganization of the Boston Federation. That happy experience, brief though it was, gives me the feeling of still belonging to the Boston community.

The Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of Pittsburgh

... The Jewish community of America is indebted to Boston for leading the way in establishing a federation as an instrument of Jewish community coordination and development. Without the federation it would have been impossible to have fostered and maintained the many social improvements to meet our communal obligations.

STANLEY J. KANN, President

Federation of Jewish Charities of San Francisco

... The role which the Associated Jewish Philanthropies has played throughout the five decades of activity, both for the benefit of the Jewish community and as a pattern for the rest of the community, is known nationwide. The high standards which you have established and maintained can only be emulated by other communities throughout the United States. We extend to you our genuine compliments upon your great achievements.

NAT SCHMULOWITZ, President

Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York

... It is fitting that so important a milestone as your fiftieth anniversary be noted by the entire country, because yours is the pioneer Jewish Federation in America. Yours is the "mother" organization of all Jewish community organizations and widely recognized as the forerunner of the Community Chest movement, sectarian and non-sectarian. The Federation movement has a hold on American Jewry because it is a channel for organized expression of the Jewish social motive and an instrument for meeting the magnitude of the social task in modern life.

GEORGE Z. MEDALIE, former President

The Federation of Jewish Charities of Philadelphia

... In meeting your own Jewish community needs creatively and on a high plane you have served the general community of Boston as well. Your influence has reached out beyond the confines of Boston. Your participation in the growth and development of Jewish communal efforts in this country and abroad have made you a potent factor in Jewish life. It is our sincere hope that you will continue your outstanding performance and that you will have many happy occasions for celebration.

ARTHUR BLOCH, President

The Jewish Federation and Jewish Welfare Fund of St. Louis

... The growth of Jewish federations has been one of the most forward-looking and constructive elements in American Jewish life. Through the development and use of local leadership it has been possible not only to raise large sums of money to relieve Jews in war-torn countries, but, on the local scene, to develop and effectuate a basic sense of responsibility on the part of the individual and the community. You have earned a place of distinction among the Federations of the country.

JESSE A. WOLFORT, President

★ Greetings ★

DR. MAURICE B. HEXTER, former Executive Director of the Federated Jewish Charities of Boston 1918-1929, now Executive Vice President of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York.

... It is difficult for me to realize that twenty-six years have past since I first came to Boston to be interviewed by a group of the founding fathers of the Federated. I can hardly believe that there was a time when I never lived in Boston because so many of my close friends are still here . . . I think it only right that I say to the Boston Jewish community that I have constantly fallen back on my Boston experience to help me reach decisions here in New York where, necessarily, we paint on a broader canvas. I find that by reliving my Boston experiences, where we did things on a much more intensive scale, that I derived a good deal of help . . . I can only wish the Associated Jewish Philanthropies of Boston another fifty equally fruitful years of existence, and then some more.

The Jewish Charities of Chicago

... What we owe to Boston is not only the initial impetus for the effective organization and administration of community programs for social welfare among the American Jews, but more particularly it is an outstanding example of the development of community unity and, if you will, something of a spiritualizing of this work. Boston has been a potent force to both larger and smaller Jewish communities in the country. We all have profited from Boston's sturdy, effective program.

JOHN M. FRANK, President

United Jewish Social Agencies of Cincinnati

... The rapid growth of the federation movement testifies to the wisdom and foresight of the pioneers in this field. There is little doubt that the federation movement has made a real contribution to Jewish community life. We in Cincinnati consider ourselves a rival claimant to your honor, although the date of the formation of your Federation pre-dates ours by slightly over a year. The accomplishments of the first fifty years of the Boston Federation presage even greater accomplishments for the future.

BERNARD PEPINSKY, President

Associated Jewish Charities of Baltimore

... Your fiftieth anniversary brings a sense of pride not only to you but to Jewish Federations throughout the country. The growth of federation movements such as yours, which set the pattern for Jewish citizens in so many cities, must be a source of deepest satisfaction to those who have seen you grow to your present enviable position. We in Baltimore feel particularly close and share the joy of your community upon reaching this milestone in your career.

LESTER S. LEVY, President

The Jewish Welfare Federation and The Jewish Welfare Fund of Cleveland

... Your Jewish community can have a deep sense of satisfaction in having been a pioneer and leader in this country in Federation work, thus blazing the trail for Community Funds in which people of all creeds make common cause in alleviating distress. Federations have been the greatest influence for unity in Jewish life in this country.

J. M. BERNE, President

Jewish Welfare Federation of Detroit

... Your anniversary is significant not only for Boston, but for every American community which has benefited from the Federation and Community Chest movements. Fifty years ago you gave dramatic recognition to two basic principles of democratic living — voluntary acceptance of social responsibility and respect for the welfare and order of the total community.

WILLIAM FRIEDMAN, President

Federation of Jewish Welfare Organizations of Los Angeles

... As president of the Los Angeles Federation and as a former Bostonian who still has a very warm spot for his native city, I send you hearty congratulations upon the attainment of your golden anniversary and upon the vitality with which you are now carrying on. Boston has led the way for so many years in so many lines of endeavor that it is not surprising that Boston should have shown the way for efficient philanthropic activity.

WALTER S. HILBORN, President

Federation of Jewish Charities

Building For The Future

by B. M. SELEKMAN, Executive Director

Associated Jewish Philanthropies 1929-1945;
First Kirstein Professor of Labor Relations,
Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration

FEW indeed are the areas of social life in which people can shape their own destiny. The specific communal life of a particular community offers one of those rare opportunities. An organization like the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, therefore, constitutes in a deeper sense a social mechanism through which we, the Jews of Boston, can formulate the kind of communal future we would like to create for ourselves and for our children. Our children, in their turn, building upon the structure we erect, as we do upon the foundations laid down by our fathers, will determine the directions in which they wish to travel in the days of their maturity.

Just so, fifty years ago our forbears built for the future. Of course, they were not attuned to the concept of social planning as we are today. Life was simpler then. Nevertheless they did lay down a plan when they established a federation of Jewish charities. We now take the federation idea for granted, but fifty years ago it was a novel project — to combine under a central organization for planning and financing the social services of a community. Nor was it too popular a project. For then even more than now people were loath to give up any vestige of control over the particular charity which they had nourished into existence. But our fathers persisted and their wisdom is attested by the fact that the federation they created established the basic pattern for all community work, non-Jewish as well as Jewish.

Obviously, we in our time, building on the work of those who went before us, do not seek any hard and fast, precisely detailed program. Life is too dynamic for engineers' blueprints, for charting courses that will never deviate from lines originally laid down. We must be ready to make changes; neat plans must be modified before untidy realities. Nonetheless today when our problems are endlessly complex and our communities inextricably interdependent, we want to chart courses clear-cut enough to stimulate movement toward conscious goals. We want to do ever better work in serving an ever advancing community.

What do such goals, cast in quality terms, demand of us now? In what directions do we wish to head, let us say, during the coming decade?

Can we, first of all, lay down a set of principles — a frame of reference to guide us during these next ten years — years from which we must certainly anticipate tremendous demands in the readjustments required after the most devastating and brutal war in human history?

I venture to suggest the following six guide posts:

1. The Program of Service Must Be Flexible

As Jews we know, unfortunately, that we must remain always prepared to handle crisis situations. We must always be ready to meet the impact of waves of persecution; to contribute toward refugee assistance; to help in resettlement.

Certainly the decade behind us has furnished unforgettable evidence of the need for that resourcefulness and responsibility we summarize as flexibility of service, both in our central office and in our various agencies. We mobilized to help the refugees who came to us with the rise of Hitlerism. We rose to the terrible needs of our brethren abroad. We took a firm stand in the cause of Palestine, with its record of proudly-growing accomplishment and in its time of new danger. We rallied, as did all Americans, to the communal service of our country at war.

Now the post-war period looms dark for the remnant of European Jewry — some million and a half who have survived the Nazis' terror. Although we hope that the United Nations may take upon themselves the major tasks in resettling these stricken folks, we know, too, from bitter experience that to rely entirely on such a hope may doom our brethren to homelessness and hopelessness. We must remain alerted, therefore, to help formulate adequate programs of rescue and rehabilitation, to press for their adoption, and to do our share in carrying them out.

The crucial point to remember always, however, is that such burdens of flexible service in a time of seemingly interminable emergency can be met only if we maintain a strongly-organized Jewish community in Boston. The Associated is the agency of the organized community equipped for just these kinds of burdens. We must keep it always virile and progressive.

2. The Program of Service Must Be Adequate

Virility and progressiveness in an agency like the Associated are achieved, of course, not through intermittent challenges, but through a program of continuing activities. To serve the community well in times of stress, we must serve it well from day to day.

Thus we must always meet basic needs, and meet them adequately. We must be organized to preserve family life; to safeguard children; to promote health; to stimulate sound group association for children, adolescents, and adults; to give vocational guidance and placement; to operate summer camps; to provide Jewish education; and to utilize all these services, individually and collectively, to help the returning serviceman and woman reestablish themselves in the normal life of the community.

To assure such a continuing program we must maintain a strong central organization for fund-raising and social planning.

Finally we must assure all sectors of the community the benefit of such a program; we must extend our social services to those living in contiguous metropolitan communities, as well as to those living in Boston proper. We have been learning that there can be no isolationism in life, not even in the international community. Shall we then tolerate isolationism in our own metropolitan Jewish community? Surely, in the realm of the spiritual and charitable, we cannot separate Jew from Jew by the fact that one lives in Boston, another in Chelsea, a third in Revere, or still another in Cambridge. Each and all are entitled to the same community services when they need them.

3. The Program of Service Must Proceed in Cooperative Relationships with Non-Jewish Community

We Jews are American citizens. America has been built entirely of immigrant groups. Yet above all immigrants, to us whose fathers knew persecution in the lands they fled, this country has spelled freedom — an opportunity to make our way in life, to do our part as responsible citizens, and to worship God without fear.

In Boston as in the nation, we are anxious to participate fully in the life of the community, to help our city and our country find its way through the thorny post-war problems ahead while steering true to its fundamental traditions of tolerance, democracy, and mutual aid.

We therefore wish always to maintain, and ever to strengthen our already close relationships with such voluntary non-sectarian agencies as the Greater Boston Community Fund and the Greater Boston Community Council (formerly the Boston Council of Social Agencies). These agencies mobilize the goodwill and the resources of all the people to make Boston a better community in which to live. We intend to do our share toward keeping them vigorous and vital institutions.

Just so we must seek always to help promote sound programs of public welfare. We Jews, as all Americans, receive benefits from, and also help finance, the massive programs of social security now functioning in our country. We wish to do our part in enlarging and improving these programs.

We wish to cooperate also in providing programs for recreation and neighborhood life so that ever more opportunities may be available for men and women of all faiths to meet on common ground as American citizens and members of the Boston community; to play and think and work together for their own self-development and for the good of the whole community.

In doing so, we espouse neither an isolationist ghettoism nor blind assimilation. Neither do we wish to surrender our individualism. We meet our non-Jewish friends and neighbors not as an apologetic minority but as equals — different in religion and group tradition — yet Americans all, devoted to the building of a progressive democratic community.

4. The Program of Services Must Achieve Maximum Integration

Through the accidents of historical development community services have been built around specific agencies. These agencies have served their purposes well.

The time now has come, however, to think of fields of service, rather than of special agencies. For we should deal henceforth with the whole individual who has problems rather than with the various problems of that individual — family, children, job, health, recreation — which we allocate to particular agencies. We must constantly strive, therefore, to achieve the greatest possible liaison between case work, group work, health services, vocational guidance, and Jewish education, eliminating multiple referrals and minimizing the necessity for sending clients from one agency to another.

Perhaps, someday we shall come to central intake service, human relations centers located in strategic geographic areas of concentrated population, with the stigma of charity removed, so that all people regardless of their economic situations, may avail themselves of services of which they are in need. There will always, of course, be need for specialization; and certain problems can be handled adequately only in certain environments and with certain facilities. When this is granted, our goal still remains the achievement of the maximum possible integration.

5. The Program of Service Must Seek to Enrich the Knowledge of Human Behavior

Much of our task consists of helping people in trouble. The thorniest human difficulties arise from maladjustments in relationships, whether in the family, or the neighborhood, or the work environment. We are slowly building up knowledge of the causes of maladjustment; we are slowly acquiring skills in resolving maladjustments.

But the task is yet in its very beginning; our skills in helping people in trouble lag far behind our technologic skills in making material things. The quest for knowledge must be unceasing.

I hope, accordingly, that every agency, every service in the Associated, will look upon itself not only as a place where human beings facing immediate difficulties can be helped, but also as a research and teaching center. Everything we do in every agency should be considered part and parcel of the human effort to enrich knowledge, so that we and our fellow-workers of the whole scientific community can do a better job the next time, and still a better job the next year, and a steadily improving job in the years to come.

Toward this most challenging of objectives, we must continue to strengthen our relationships with the various, appropriate professional schools in medicine and social work, and indeed with all institutions of learning in which serious concern is given to the biological and social sciences.

Our own hospital, Beth Israel, has already given dramatic evidence of the great value of such affiliation. The program of research and teaching carried on there not only enriches the resources of the doctors at the bedside of patients needing their skills, but also adds to the sum total of medical science. Conversely, the staffs and laboratories of the medical schools are constantly pouring into Beth Israel the results of experiments and discoveries which lift the whole standard of medical care, and help to keep our practicing doctors abreast of the very latest in medical science.

The progress thus made at the Hospital constitutes the strongest possible argument for extending the same kind of program to the other agencies. Our staff members should be encouraged to work cooperatively with the schools of social work which carry on teaching and research. For research is essentially a cooperative undertaking. The school and the practicing agency each need the other. Our own staff cannot do full justice by itself or its clients unless it actively participates in the life and work of the schools and clinics of the community.

I know of nothing that will pay such long-run dividends as encouraging our professional workers to establish and maintain these close interrelationships of teaching, research, and practice.

6. The Program of Service Must Establish High Personnel Standards

The best principles we may adopt for our work will go for naught unless we include one final principle: We must engage the most competent, most promising personnel to staff our various agencies. We must have people with good training, with character, with imagination, with a sense of dedication to the advancement of human welfare and the science of human behavior. In a sense, our greatest investment in the Associated, as in any enterprise, is in its personnel. Without people of high quality to carry it forward, a program, no matter how well formulated, remains only a program on paper.

It should be remembered, however, that we in Boston are competing for good personnel with other large Jewish communities like New York and Chicago. We must be willing to establish conditions which will attract people to Boston and keep them here. We must not only assure them adequate remuneration; we must also create those opportunities for research and teaching that attract especially the best practitioners.

A vigorous, vigilant personnel committee is indispensable for seeing to it that our personnel standards keep abreast, and even ahead of those in other communities.

So much for principles. Let us now look at the content of the program we should aim to develop in each field of service during the next ten years.

1. Health

We should plan towards developing a medical center which will make available the comprehensive services necessary to provide acute, chronic, convalescent, and domiciliary care. Since Beth Israel occupies the high pinnacle it does in the medical world, and has strong affiliations with medical schools, obviously it should occupy the focal place in such a development.

The Jewish Memorial Hospital should plan, as soon as practical, to have its facilities on the same grounds as the Beth Israel. The Jewish Memorial and Beth Israel should work out such cooperative relations that, regardless of board structure, the flow of patients and facilities so necessary for efficient service can be assured.

Facilities for convalescent care are still to be provided. They should be planned by and emanate from the medical center. So should domiciliary care. Indeed, every agency in the Associated, insofar as it needs medical services, should turn to the center for them.

With regard to custodial care, the present resources of the Jewish Memorial Hospital could be used for this purpose, if and when it provides new facilities on or near the grounds of Beth Israel. On the whole, I would suggest that we move slowly in establishing new facilities for custodial care. Public programs are under consideration which may go far toward meeting this problem.

Needless to say, the medical center must have a strong program of research and teaching, and an adequate number of full-time staff members to head up its important and strategic services.

2. Case Work

Since this service deals with families and children, it is obviously basic to the whole program of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies.

From time immemorial the most important social institution in civilization has been the family. It is the primary agency for educating the young, for character formation, and for transmitting the customs and traditions of the community.

Case workers handle primarily the problems encountered by individuals that threaten their relationships with family, kinfolk, and group, or their effective functioning in the daily environment. We must see to it that our case work services meet the highest possible standards.

Plans are already under way for creating one agency to develop and administer these services, and to study measures for strengthening individual family life. Under sound direction, such an agency will result in economy of effort and better all-round planning.

Our case-work services must always be strongly staffed. For, in addition to their normal tasks of helping individuals meet problems of daily living, these services constitute our emergency arm. Depressions come, and with them unemployment and distress. Then our case-work services must handle relief needs; then they must cooperate closely with public welfare facilities. Crises of persecution and uprooting arise in Jewish life. Then our case-work services must be ready to help absorb refugees and place children, Anti-social symptoms develop among youth, as during the war period. Then our case-work services must wrestle with these acute behavior problems. Just so, as the war draws to a victorious conclusion, the returning veteran and his reabsorption into civilian life becomes a major responsibility of these case-work services.

Certainly we must see to it that adequate tools are given the case-work services. The agency must have its well-manned, decentralized district offices. It must have also its special offices, such as those serving youth. It must obtain those still experimental facilities for clients able to pay for services they may need in meeting problems of social relationships.

3. Group Work

If there is one area in which we are actually underdeveloped, it is in providing neighborhood and center facilities for young people and adults, and in bringing the resources of the rapidly developing group work skills to their service.

At present we have only two centers, the Young Men's Hebrew Association in Roxbury and the Hecht Neighborhood House in Dorchester. Neither of them is well located or properly equipped to render the service needed in a community the size of ours.

We need at least two good buildings — one in the Roxbury-Dorchester-Mattapan region and the other in the Brookline-Allston-Brighton region. These buildings should become centers that will not only bring our people the benefit of the resources available in them, but will also make them proud to be counted among their members.

Fortunately we have made a good start in the creation of the Jewish Centers Association, which is now laying the groundwork for an adequate program. We must be ready, as soon as war conditions permit, to see to it that this program is carried to fruition.

4. Camps

During the past years we have had two camps — Country Week and Chebacco. While they are well-equipped, they have been entirely inadequate in size for meeting the needs in their field of service for so large a community as ours. We have just this year acquired a third site in Maine. Henceforth, we shall have facilities for one thousand children, and we may come nearer to providing minimum, indispensable care. I urge that the administration of the camps be tied in closely with the case-work agency. For the experience of the children in camp should be part and parcel of the year-round treatment of each respective family's problems.

5. Vocational and Economic Services

One of the major problems confronting all Jewish communities is vocational and educational direction of youth. Some of this direction is given, of course, by the agencies carrying on case work and group work. But they can only do part of the job.

There is need for a service whose constant business it is to study economic and industrial trends, as well as educational facilities for directing young people into occupations offering them most promise of a successful career. The approach should, of course, be that of counseling rather than that of technical vocational guidance. For the essential task is to help the individual make his own choice in terms of his own capacities.

In addition to guiding young people, this service also has the responsibility of helping individuals obtain gainful employment. Vocational counseling and placement should thus work closely with other agencies in the Associated. The joint aim remains always to make the individual self-supporting as soon and as effectively as possible.

Finally, there is need for guiding and helping individuals in developing small businesses. Much interest throughout the country has recently been focused upon this field of small business. Our people long have shown their predilection for seeking self-support and then success through their own little store or factory. But we know also that the mortality in small business is exceedingly high. Our own Hebrew Free Loan Society is now going through the process of re-thinking its program; it should serve as a counseling as well as a lending agency.

6. Jewish Education

I come now to the only program for which we as a Jewish community are exclusively responsible. Conceivably non-sectarian agencies could provide for us the other services underwritten by the Associated. But we alone must provide a program of Jewish education.

And, what among all we do is more important? Here is a service that transmits the Jewish heritage to our young people. Here is a service from which our young people will find the security of age-old roots in a world of intolerance and persecution. We do not wish to make chauvinists of our children. But we do wish to give them the fortitude and strength that comes from the knowledge that they are the inheritors of one of the great civilizations of all time.

May I say also that to the extent that we thus enrich our children with the wisdom of Israel, we thereby make them more effective and more creative American citizens. Men and women of character, integrity, and idealism are developed to the extent that the ethics and precepts of their religion and their tradition help to form them, and to furnish them spiritual and cultural values.

Given this point of view, can our typical allotment for the program of Jewish education appear anything but niggardly? Literally miracles have been worked with the meager resources at hand. We must strengthen this program. We must give the Hebrew Teachers College additional help so that it may carry on its indispensable task of training Jewish teachers. We must make it an attractive place for Jewish scholars to carry forward their teaching and research.

We must revivify the Bureau of Jewish Education and enable it to administer an effective program. Not only should it improve the standards of elementary and secondary schools, but it also should provide an adequate program for adult education.

Above all we must take this service to our hearts and give it the primacy that education has always had in Jewish life.

7. Community Organization

It is impossible for us to do any of the stimulating, challenging tasks implicit in such a program unless we make and keep the Associated Jewish Philanthropies a strong central organization, both for fund-raising and for planning.

The day is long past when a few wealthy individuals supported the program of social service. In the days ahead we shall need larger sums of money than our founders even dreamed of fifty years ago. We need ever increasing numbers to contribute to the community's funds. In 1928 there were 3500 contributors; at the end of the 1944-1945 campaign the number of contributors was 32,426; in 1955 it may well be 50,000.

Obviously such an organization can be maintained only by an adequate staff in fund-raising, in community interpretation and education, and in administration.

No matter how much money we would raise, it would not be wisely spent unless we carry forward continuous planning, continuous surveying, continuous evaluation, continuous sensing of new needs and developing programs to meet them. For this reason, too, we need an adequate staff in the central office.

I hasten to add, however, that no staff, no matter how well trained and equipped can do this job by itself. There must be continuous and earnest participation by the lay members of the community. At this moment, the Plans and Scope Committee has completed two years of work. It would be a tragic mistake to think its work will be over when it submits its final report. Our problems are constantly changing. We live in a dynamic world, and in a world of crises and catastrophies. We must constantly re-evaluate what we are doing. We must constantly see that our program is balanced; that the money we raise is most wisely spent in terms of the total needs of the community. Obviously the work of the Plans and Scope Committee and the work of all the Boards and Executive Committees can never be completed and final. Complacency is the greatest danger to social work service as to other enterprises. Let us be always alert and restless in endeavoring to do the very best for ourselves and the community.

I end as I began. Here in planning for a Jewish community program, we do have the rare opportunity to shape our own destiny. We become, in a sense, makers of history. We can plan our future development. When our fathers adopted the first by-laws for a federation of charities fifty years ago, they wrought wisely. We are still garnishing fruit from the seeds they planted. Let us in our own generation be worthy of their handiwork, so that our children in their day may rise up and call us blessed as today we call our fathers.

Pioneering in Federated Financing

by SIDNEY S. COHEN, Executive Director
Associated Jewish Philanthropies

CIVIL War days through V-E Day in World War II cover a span of eighty years and the history of fund-raising for Jewish charity in Boston. In 1864, a single benevolent society, with 150 dues-paying members, doled out between four and five hundred dollars to a handful of "unfortunate poor." Today, well over 30,000 are contributing in excess of $2,250,000 towards the support of fifty local, national, and overseas agencies through the Combined Jewish Appeal. The progress represents the difference between archaic methods of alms giving by a first-generation Jewish community of 2,500 and Greater Boston Jewish community of 125,000 through social service planning. Greater Boston Jewry contributes the second largest amount in all America in a single campaign for Jewish purposes.

When, in 1869, the United Hebrew Benevolent Association's annual ball netted the then unheard of sum of $2,000, half of that amount was set aside for an emergency fund. This condition of comparative affluence was not to recur in Boston for three-quarters of a century. Celebrating its silver jubilee, the president of the Hebrew Benevolent proudly reported the "enormous expenditures of $4,000" in 1899.

The nineties were anything but gay for world Jewry. Flocking to these shores by the thousands to escape the pogroms of Czarist Russia, the newcomers increased the Boston Jewish from 5,000 to 20,000. By 1894, seven Jewish charitable societies were spending $34,000 to meet the increasingly acute problem with revenue of only $23,000, thus creating the first of almost yearly deficits which were to perplex boards of directors for almost a half-century.

"Approaching you under embarrassing and perplexing conditions," the Hebrew Benevolent reported, "only 540 persons can be found who are willing to contribute five dollars a year, equal to ten cents a week, for the relief of the poor." Income from dues, formerly the principal source of income, now covered only one-fifth of the total budget. The community experienced continuous appeals throughout the year.

In October, 1894, delegates of all Jewish charitable organizations gathered for an extraordinary session. A federation of all societies was agreed upon not only as the way out of the current dilemma but with the hope that "financial difficulties, causing so much uneasiness each year, will be removed forever, and that, not alone will the poor be relieved in a more systematic manner than heretofore, but also the means needed for their relief will be secured with less friction."

The organization of the Federation of Jewish Charities in 1895 marked the birth of the federation and community chest movement in America. But the mere organization of the Federation proved no panacea. The first annual report for thirteen months' operation, showing income of only $13,092, stated: "Another mistake was made in estimating at too high a figure the capacity of the Jewish public for charitable purposes . . . only a limited number of people (489) can be found who are both in a position and willing to contribute to the Charities."

With the Federation providing only $8,000 of the $26,000 needed by the agencies, the president of United Hebrew Benevolent posed this perplexing problem: "If increase of demands upon the treasury is to be met by decrease of income, what will be the need?"

On the brighter side, the Federation reported that "for a moderate increase of expense, twice as much work has been obtained. To run the Employment Bureau alone used to cost formerly two-thirds of what is now expended for the work of all societies together. This statement we trust will settle once and forever all dissatisfactions based upon rumors but not on facts . . . It may be said with truth that also in its work of collection, Federation has been a success."

In 1904, the $12,500 distributed still represented only a third of its agencies' budgets, despite the fact that every known fund-raising device of that day was used. Interesting items on the treasurer's ninth annual report showed $6,200 income from Day of Atonement collections. An investment of $365.75 for the purchase of charity boxes brought in only $304.53. That year "any person paying the sum of fifty dollars or more became a member of any and all societies."

Although the Federation's income had reached $20,000, the number of contributors had increased by only 200 in ten years. "It is evident," President Lehman Pickert reported, "that we must concentrate our efforts in the vital work of raising funds. Out of our estimated population of 65,000, ten percent of 65,000 should be enrolled as contributors . . . Our people are characteristically charitable, and many of them have prospered, and if we but systematize our efforts to reach them we should achieve gratifying results."

In 1907, the "Greater Federation" was organized to include fourteen societies. When by 1913 income had surpassed $80,000, "complete control of revenues solicited in a thoroughly business-like manner" was reported, but "the list of 1,200 donors appallingly small when one considers there are 75,000 Jews in Boston."

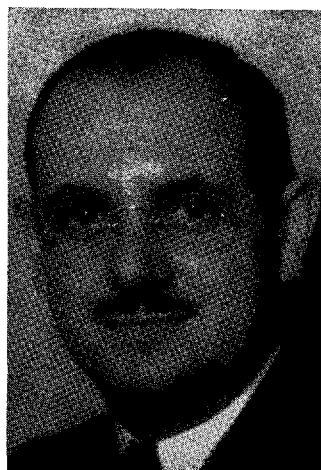

During its first twenty-odd years, the Federation's relationship with its constituent societies was little more than financial. Support still came from a comparative handful, despite the fact that immigrants of the nineties had established their roots and prospered. By 1916, the income of the Boston Federation was down to $68,000, the smallest amount raised by the ten largest Federations of this era.

In 1917, the historic report of the Welfare Committee called for broad community social planning, requiring an outlay of at least $150,000. Despite protests from veteran campaigners, Louis E. Kirstein, with characteristic vision, urged the adoption of the report in its entirety. He accepted the challenge as campaign chairman and surrounded himself with a group of young men in key campaign posts.

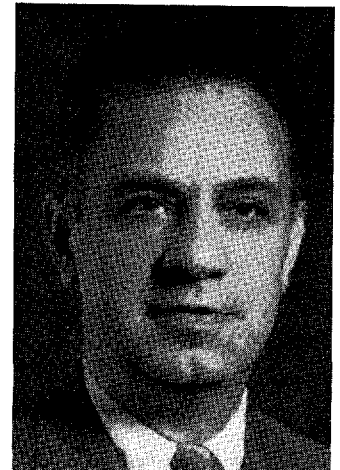

Adopting the slogan "United Israel for Charity," they set the goal not at $150,000 but at $200,000 and 5,000 members. At the opening dinner "well-known philanthropists doubled and trebled their former subscriptions and their action was followed by a burst of generosity unparalleled in the history of the city." During the two-month campaign, World War I broke out. The twelve-day "wind-up," under the chairmanship of Leon Strauss, had sixteen teams covering the city and included the first Women's Division, with Mrs. Harry Liebman as Chairman. Daily report luncheons at Ford Hall "were so surprisingly effective that the bare announcement of results was sufficient to create all the enthusiasm that was needed without resorting to speech-making."

The 1917 campaign closed with $251,736 and 8,458 contributors of whom 7,200 were first time givers. The thoroughness of the advance planning, timing, and execution of that campaign twenty-eight years ago has not been approached in any American city since.

In the following years, the fund-raising organization lacked above all continuity and stability, judging by the fluctuation in contribution income — $170,000 in 1918, $389,000 in 1919, and down to $267,000 in 1920. In the twenty-fifth anniversary year of the Federation, the deficit reached $50,000. In his president's message prior to the disastrous campaign of 1920, Louis Baer reported that "to show our appreciation of valuable services rendered to the Jewish poor by various non-sectarian agencies of the community . . . we assigned $10,000 for distribution amongst these agencies." This gesture was to be repeated fifteen years later when the Associated Jewish Philanthropies made a similar token gift of $15,000 to the Greater Boston Community Fund.

As a result of the disastrous business year of 1921, President Baer reported that "many supporters reduced their subscriptions or failed to pay them entirely."

Then came the boom days when there were supposed to be at least two chickens in every pot, a car in every garage. These were also the days of planless financing and mounting Federated deficits. In debt to the banks for $45,000, and with another $15,000 remaining unpaid to the constituent societies, President Albert W. Kaffenburgh in 1925 urged that "the Federated so arrange its budgets as to keep within income." Unfortunately, Mr. Kaffenburgh's advice went unheeded and deficits mounted despite increased income. Two years later, he reported the even gloomier picture of "the very precarious condition of our finances. We carried over a $50,000 deficit and the 1927 campaign showed a loss in revenue of $82,000."

Meanwhile, huge building funds were being raised for Beth Israel Hospital, temples, and synagogues throughout the city. Evidently, the Federated had failed to attract the "new wealth" while those who for years had furnished the backbone of support "had dwindled and the proportion left had reached the point of diminishing returns."

By 1928, Federated's bank debt was $60,000. Abraham P. Spitz, then chairman of the budget committee, declared: "This deficit hangs like a millstone upon us." He emphatically called for "strict economy," with a budget not to exceed $450,000. Numerous efforts were made to organize a "Jewish Community Chest" to include the new Beth Israel Hospital and all other important unaffiliated agencies. Negotiations dragged on for months while the campaign was postponed. The United Campaign netted only $570,000 that year and made only $315,000 of the Federated's $450,000 "strict economy" budget available. Submitting its report seven months after the fiscal year has elapsed, the budget committee warned that unless a supplementary campaign were undertaken that spring, "it will be necessary and obligatory to close some or all of our philanthropic agencies."

Any hopes for a financial comeback in the fall of 1929 were dealt a staggering blow by the stock market crash. The United Campaign netted approximately $590,000 in pledges for the year, including another emergency fund to pay off some of the indebtedness to the banks and agencies. In the final months of the fiscal year, agency budgets were cut twenty percent and relief activities through District Service curtailed.

In the face of the depression and with an inherited Federated indebtedness of more than $100,000, the Associated Jewish Philanthropies took over in 1930. A complete overhauling of the financial structure was called for by the Boston Jewish Communal Survey. "The need for organizing fund raising on a sound basis is indicated by the past experience of the Federated," the report declared.

Pointing to the steady decline in the number of contributors from 8,000 in 1917, 6,000 in 1929, 5,000 in 1927, and 4,000 in 1929, the report observed: "The general community has been contributing less and a relatively small number of persons has been called upon to give more money in the past few years . . . It is very important, in the present Boston situation, that intensive measures be taken to develop the financial resources of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies. The only hope for lasting and adequate support is in the enrollment of maximum number of contributors from the entire Jewish community, irrespective of the amount contributed."

With the first campaign of the Associated in the fall of 1930, the "new deal" in Boston fund-raising was inaugurated. Employing proven fund-raising techniques, the campaign surpassed in intensity and enthusiasm the historic 1917 drive. Despite demoralizing business conditions and further drastic curtailment of big gifts, the campaign was most successful.

The high point was the enrollment of 9,000 subscribers, more than double that of the previous year and a new record for the community. That year, too, the Business Men's Council, in charge of trade and professional team solicitation, and the Women's Division were organized on a permanent basis. Nevertheless, income failed to keep pace with increased relief demands, and by February funds were exhausted and the treasurer reported "$34,000 due to merchants for milk, coal, food, and clothing."

That spring, an emergency campaign netted an additional $40,000, bringing the year's total to $616,000, the greatest amount in thirty-five years of federated financing. In addition to distributing a new high of $538,000 to its agencies, the Associated paid off $75,000 of its inherited indebtedness that first year. In contrast to the planless financing of the twenties, AJP was now operating on a "pay-as-you-go" basis.

The depression took its toll in the 1931 campaign and although pledges fell off $100,000, it was still necessary to pay off $85,000 more in bank loans. But the full force of the depression hit in 1932 and continued for three years. Although pledges were just over $400,000, the number of contributors increased.

Reviewing those critical years, Casper M. Grosberg, treasurer declared: "The minimum expenditures averaged at least $500,000, and on a very conservative and somewhat skimpy basis, which was reached by reduction in salaries along the line and other economies or sacrifice of service wherever humanly possible. The difference in our budget requirements was made up by money received from the city-wide Emergency Relief Campaigns for these years. This enabled us to live through the worst of the depression, and to come up to this point with our activities practically intact and our financial position no worse than at the beginning of the depression."

It was not until 1935 that the trend turned upward. Commenting on the $61,000 increase for the year, President Kirstein declared: "It is a heartening showing when one considers the severe trials through which most members of the community have been living during the bitter years of the depression."

The trend continued upward for the next four years — past the half million dollar mark — and in the peak years of '38 and '39 pledges exceeded $620,000. The roll of contributors reached a new high of 18,000.

The year 1937 was particularly noteworthy in that not only was the campaign goal oversubscribed — for the first time in twenty years — but it was completed within a three-week period rather than in two, three, or more months as was the case in previous years.

During the 1930's, Boston Jewry pledged over five million dollars to the AJP and actually paid ninety-six percent of that amount. This collection record is all the more remarkable because it covers depression years.

Just as the influx of immigrants in their flight from persecution was the motivating factor in the old Federation's creation, so the past refugee problem caused a major change in Boston's Jewish communal financing.

Pioneers and pace setters in financing its local program, Boston had lagged behind other communities in supporting overseas and national needs. With the exception of one or two campaigns for overseas relief immediately after World War I, non-local appeals were given sporadic and indifferent support. Despite Hitler terrorism of the early thirties, attempts at united campaigns on behalf of the Joint Distribution Committee, the United Palestine Appeal and other agencies were far from successful.

In 1937 the United Jewish Campaign for Refugees, Overseas and National needs was organized to include Boston and its suburban communities. In three years the fund grew from $121,000 to $565,000 raised in 1939 when the AJP threw its full campaign personnel and machinery into the effort.

The operation of two major drives a year — AJP in the fall and the UJC in the spring — meant continuous campaigning for at least eight months of the year, as well as duplication of expenditures and effort. In 1940, therefore, both campaigns were merged into the Combined Jewish Appeal, making Boston the first major community which raised its funds for local, national, and overseas needs in a single campaign. According to the terms of the agreement, the AJP and the UJC were to receive amounts equal to that raised in their separate campaigns, with the AJP amount guaranteed. When the total exceeded the amounts agreed upon, the additional funds were to be divided equally.

More than 25,000 individuals contributed $1,085,000 to the 1940 Combined Appeal and in the next two years the total reached $1,350,000. In 1943, the high national income, full employment, and the favorable tax provisions, aided substantially in the oversubscription of the $1,500,000 goal by $125,000. But it was in 1944 that the Greater Boston Jewish community shattered national records when more than 32,000 contributed $2,250,000.

Although entitled by agreement to share equally in these vastly increased funds, the AJP voluntarily froze the amount it was to receive at the 1940 level. Thus, hundreds of thousands of dollars were made available for overseas, Palestine, and other wartime needs.

For fifteen years, much needed improvements and changes in the local communal agencies structure have been delayed because of the depression and, later, because of emergency situations overseas. In more recent years, however, due to a reduction of relief expenditures, the inability of agencies to obtain adequate personnel, and the wartime restrictions on repairs, the AJP income has exceeded expenditures.

Thus, the Associated Jewish Philanthropies built up an emergency reserve fund of about $300,000. Small though this amount might be to weather a serious economic recession, it constitutes the first sizable reserve ever accumulated in its fifty years of existence.

The Associated Jewish Philanthropies in 1944 embarked in a modest way on a program of expanded activities which could no longer be delayed. For the current fiscal year, for the first time since the depression, budgets totalling $600,000 were approved, more than was forthcoming from the Combined Appeal for operating purposes. Estimated budgets for the coming year are far in excess of this amount.

Boston's Jewish community stands on the threshold of its greatest program of social reconstruction. The course has been chartered for the decade ahead. To this generation is afforded the opportunity and privilege of building soundly for the next half century.

They Came for Early Diagnosis and Treatment

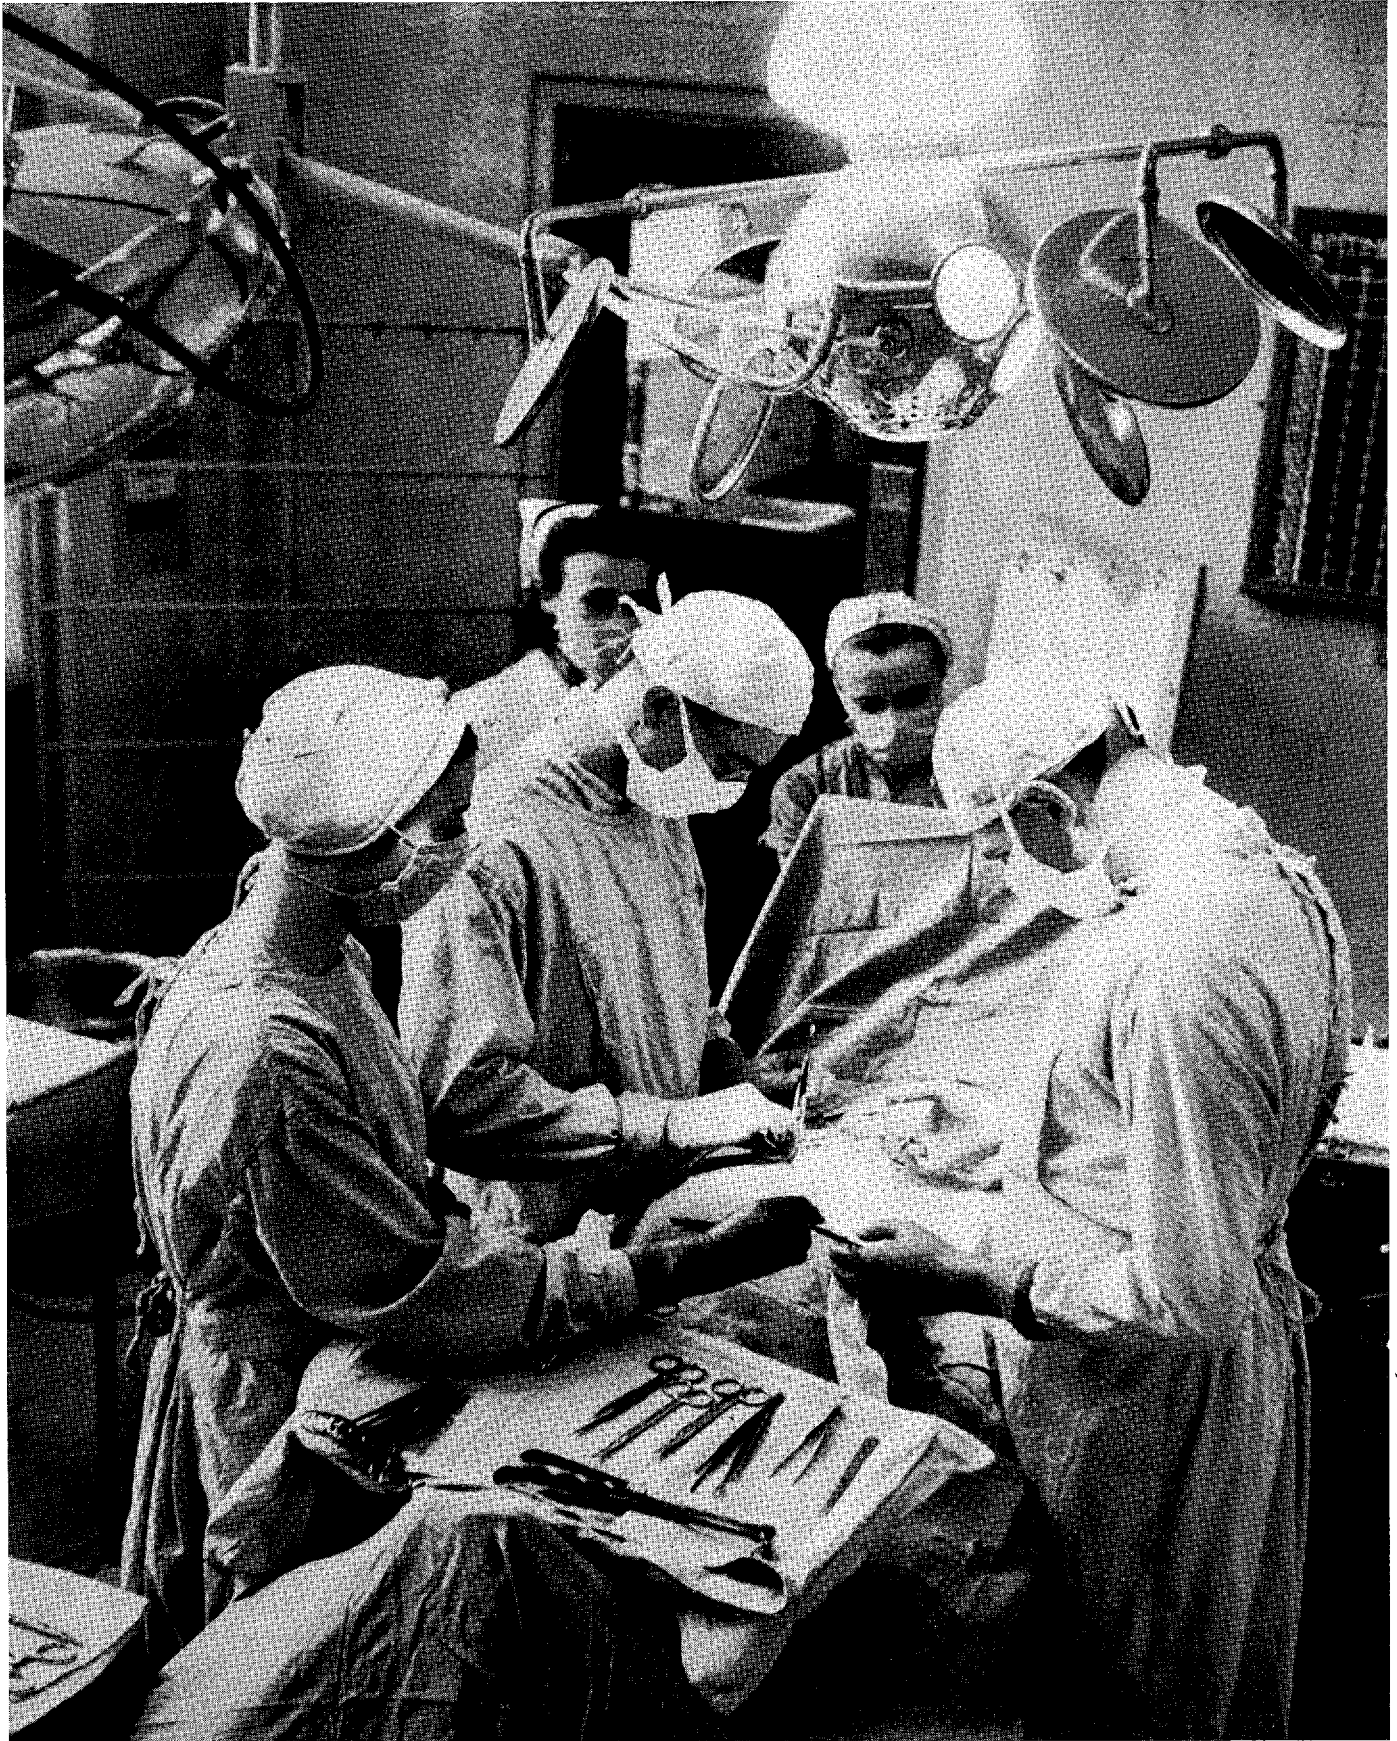

MORE than four decades ago a small group of Jewish physicians and laymen embarked upon a venture which has served as the foundation upon which the present elaborate structure of health services for the Jewish community of Greater Boston was erected. On August 1, 1902, through the moral and financial support of a few Jewish people and the devotion of Drs. Kalman Davidson, Maurice Gerstein, and Philip Sumner, the Mount Sinai Hospital Out-patient Department was opened on Chamber Street in the West End. Housed in a converted five-room store, the quarters were inadequate almost from the very beginning. Attendance was large, and frequently, even on cold winter days, patients were obliged to await their turn on the street.

Founding of Mount Sinai Hospital — the first Jewish clinic in Boston — was not easy. There was considerable opposition to such a venture. The argument advanced against it was that the hospitals in the community were of good repute and were available to all. It was also stressed that it would be bad judgment to add an unnecessary institution which might serve to develop antagonisms of the medical profession as well as of those responsible for the maintenance of the already existing hospitals.

The arguments of those who believed in the need for the development of a Jewish institution was centered around two points: one was that a majority of the Jewish population of Boston at that time were immigrants, unfamiliar with the English language and therefore found it difficult to make themselves understood. This was an important deterrent to adequate diagnosis and treatment. The second emphasis was placed upon the psychological influence on health and disease. It was rightly claimed that the Jewish patient must not only be made physically comfortable but also placed mentally at ease by surrounding him with a Jewish environment, if at all possible. It was pointed out that the Jewish patient who is made more happy in a Jewish hospital would respond more readily to medical care.

One year later, because of the already-mentioned overcrowded conditions and the desired and necessary expansion of clinics, the Mount Sinai Hospital Out-patient Department was transferred from Chamber Street to 17 Staniford Street and officially opened its doors at this new location on Sunday, November 23, 1903. Communal leaders, religious representatives, including Mr. Joseph L. Bergman, president; the Rev. Dr. James De Normandie, pastor of the First Church in Roxbury and a trustee of Roxbury Latin School, attended the dedication at which Mr. Louis D. Brandeis, later Mr. Justice Brandeis, was the guest speaker.

The attendance grew from year to year, and in 1913 it was again found necessary to give serious thought and consideration to an expanding program in more modern surroundings. The services of the few physicians who originally organized the Dispensary were augmented by the activities of Drs. Harry Linenthal, Louis Mendelsohn, Louis Freedman, Albert Ehrenfried, Hyman Morrison, Dr. Isador Coriat, and others. Among the outstanding non-Jewish members of the profession on the staff were the distinguished Dr. Richard Cabot, Drs. Henry Perry, John Adams, Robert Fair, Alonzo K. Paine, and Dr. John Dewis.

Under Dr. Linenthal and Dr. Mendelsohn, a keen interest was developed in 1907 in the problem of pulmonary tuberculosis, and earnest efforts were instituted to provide better care for Jewish tuberculosis patients.

An important medical activity at Staniford Street and first begun in 1908 was an obstetrical service under the direction of Dr. Alonzo K. Paine. A home delivery service as part of the medical teaching program of Tufts College Medical School was carried on by externs radiating out of the Mount Sinai Dispensary. After the closing of the Dispensary, this service was transferred to the Jewish Maternity Clinic at Allen Street in the West End, where it functioned for a number of years. It was discontinued not only because of lack of financial support, but also because of the marked decrease of childbirth at the home, due to an increased appreciation of the advantage of lying-in hospitals.

Both the increased use of the facilities of the Dispensary and the lack of room as well as of equipment served to emphasize the need for further expansion. The lack of space made impossible the type and quality of service which those responsible for its policies desired to maintain. It appeared, therefore, to those who believed in the need for the continuance of this type of an institution that an expanding program should include not only provision for outpatient care, but also the erection of a hospital building with bed facilities.

Formation of the New B. I. H. Association

In 1911, a group of women in their earnest belief of the need of a Jewish hospital, and entirely independent of the group responsible for the activities of the Mount Sinai Dispensary, banded together under the leadership of Hyman Danzig and dedicated themselves to raise funds for this purpose. Four years later, in 1915, the Beth Israel Hospital Association was formed, and the old Dennison estate at 45 Townsend Street, Roxbury, was purchased for $8,000.

Quest for New Medical Knowledge Is Endless

This residence was converted into a forty-five bed hospital which included X-ray and laboratory facilities, operating rooms, etc. It was formally opened to the public in 1915 under the presidency of Simon Swig, with Mr. Danzig as the institution's first superintendent. Upon the death of Mr. Danzig, Myer Dana served a short term, and he launched a successful campaign to raise $100,000 for necessary hospital improvements. He, in turn, was succeeded in 1918 by Albert A. Ginzberg, who served as president for approximately twenty years. Dr. Boris E. Greenberg assumed the superintendency and served until the opening of the new Beth Israel Hospital in 1928.

The Hospital functioned on Townsend Street for but a few years when it became readily apparent that its facilities were too limited for the needs and the demands of the community. A group of public-spirited men, under the chairmanship of Albert Rosenbush, therefore, launched a campaign in 1923, setting a goal of one million dollars, to build a modern hospital, in order to provide more beds as well as for the creation of teaching facilities. The slogan of this campaign was "Nothing Is Impossible." Shortly after the start of the campaign, $400,000 was raised. As a result, land was purchased in 1924 on Brookline Avenue, adjacent to the Harvard Medical School as well as to a number of hospitals in this vicinity and in October ground was broken for the new hospital and construction begun. In 1926, an additional $600,000 was raised in a campaign conducted under the guidance of Louis E. Kirstein, and $400,000 more was raised at a Victory Dinner in 1927.

During the building process which began in 1924, the original plans were expanded, the proposed buildings enlarged, a large Outpatient Department planned and constructed, and a Nursing Home erected, thus bringing the total ultimate cost of the new Beth Israel Hospital to approximately $3,000,000. In 1928 Dr. Greenberg, who had served faithfully and well as the superintendent of the Hospital for a decade, resigned to enter the practice of his specialty. He was succeeded in May, 1928, by Dr. Charles F. Wilinsky, who obtained a leave of absence from the City Health Department, and has served as Executive Director for the past seventeen years.

Dedication of New Beth Israel

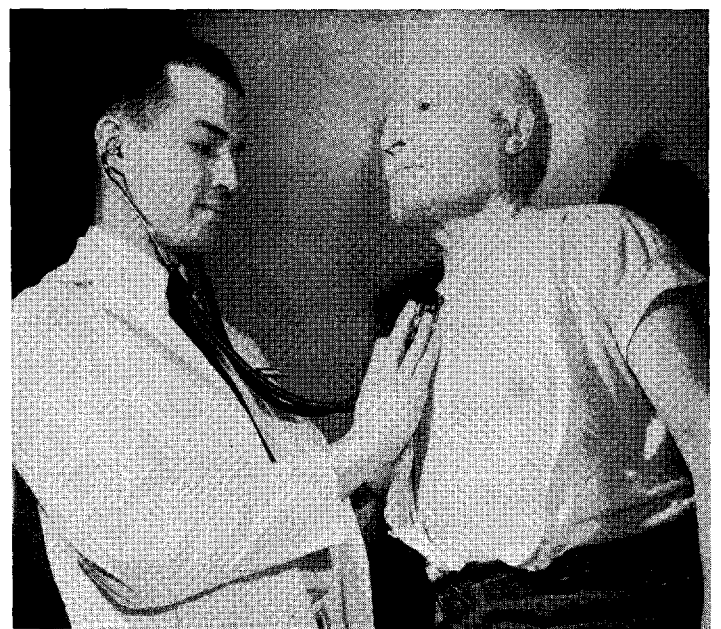

On Wednesday, August 1, 1928, many friends of the new Beth Israel Hospital were gathered in the spacious area fronting the Administration Building and participated in the dedicatory exercises, in which distinguished professional and civic leaders participated.

The speakers emphasized the importance of this addition to the well-established medical resources of the community. Its architectural beauty, complete equipment, and its varied facilities for the care of the patient were dwelt upon, and the Jewish people of Boston congratulated on a magnificent achievement.

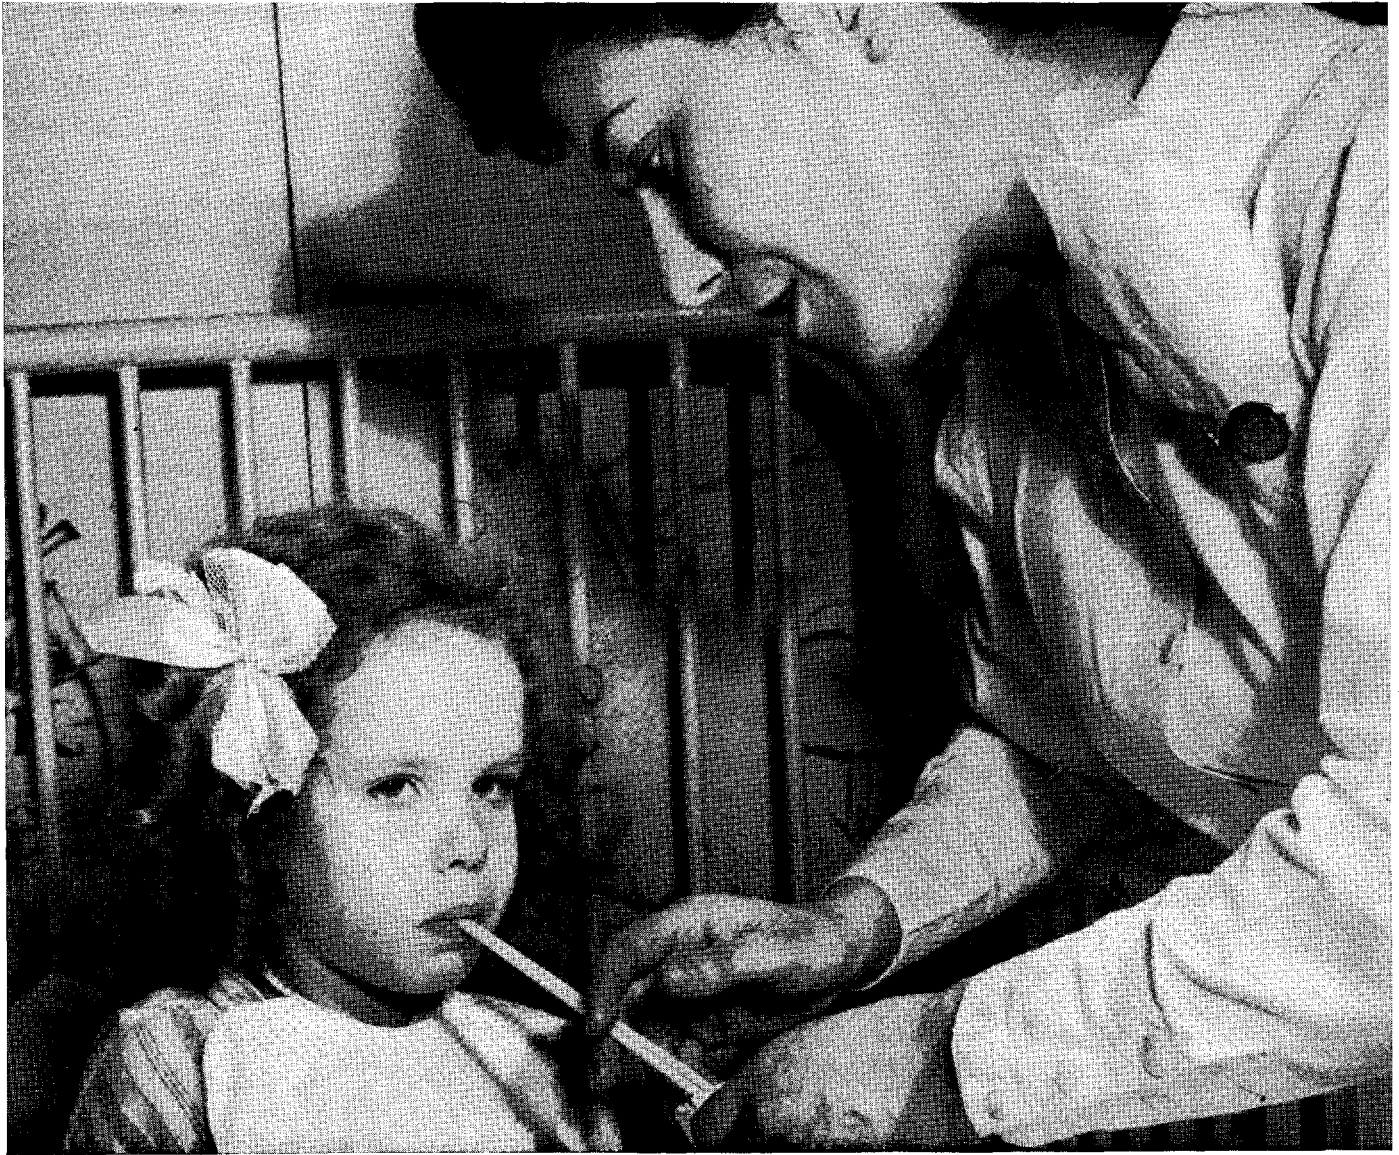

Arrangements were developed with both the Harvard and the Tufts Medical Schools for important teaching affiliations. The purpose and objectives in this development were, indeed, significant and far-reaching. As part of the teaching arrangements with the Harvard Medical School, an adequate budget was established by the hospital trustees for Medical Research under the direction of Dr. Herman L. Blumgart. Harvard also contributed materially towards the salaries of its teaching personnel at Beth Israel.

Dr. Harry Linenthal was appointed Physician-in-Chief at Beth Israel and has served in that capacity since the opening of the institution. Shortly, too, after the opening of the Hospital, Dr. Charles G. Mixer was appointed Surgeon-in-Chief and entrusted by Harvard University with the responsibility for surgical teaching. Dr. Mixer's predecessor was Dr. Wyman Whittemore, who served at the old Beth Israel Hospital for many years, and for a time at the new institution.

The teaching of Tufts Medical students was placed in the capable hands of Dr. Linenthal, Dr. Maurice E. Barron, and other able members of the staff.

The teaching program includes not only facilities for the training of medical students, but also graduate education for twenty-five interns and residents. Rich educational opportunities on a graduate level were made available to members of the medical profession.

An expanding school for nurses, first established in 1918 at the Hospital on Townsend Street, made available facilities for the training of approximately eighty-five student nurses at the new institution. This number has been increased to the present quota of 130. The School is accredited, and its graduates are accepted by State Boards of Registration throughout the United States.

Affiliation with other teaching institutions, including Simmons College, makes it possible for the Hospital to participate in the training of medical social workers, student dietitians, public health nurses, and laboratory technicians.

During the more than sixteen years of its existence on Brookline Avenue, the Beth Israel has provided hospital and outpatient care to approximately two hundred thousand individuals. The volume of free care rendered during this period represents an expenditure of about four million dollars. In addition to this tremendous volume of service rendered in the care of the sick, there have been those other important functions which have been emphasized, embracing the accepted objectives and services of a great health institution. It has indeed been well said that the health program of a community is an index of its intelligence.

Boston Jewry has been fortunate in the quality of the leadership of the men and women who have worked in order to meet adequately the needs of the less privileged. Space prohibits naming the thousands who have done so much. One would, however, be lacking in appreciation of the sacrifices and contributions of the men who have guided the destinies of the Beth Israel Hospital during more than a quarter of a century if one failed to at least name them. Among them are Albert A. Ginzberg, the late Louis E. Kirstein, his successor as president of the Hospital, David M. Watchmaker, and our present president, Casper M. Grosberg.

As in the instance of the men who have contributed to the advancement of the Beth Israel Hospital, so, too, the list of women who have been of great aid and have served so well is inexhaustible. It is only possible, however, to call attention to the small list who have served in the capacity of president of the Women's Auxiliary and whose leadership brought out all that was best in the thousands of women serving in the ranks. These have included the Hon. Jennie Loitman Barron, the late Mrs. Ernestine Prager, Mrs. Nehemiah H. Whitman, and the incumbent, Mrs. Abraham E. Pinanski. To these must be added the name of Mrs. George Wyner, responsible for the founding of Life Membership, the proceeds of which have made possible many necessary improvements.

Planned Expansion

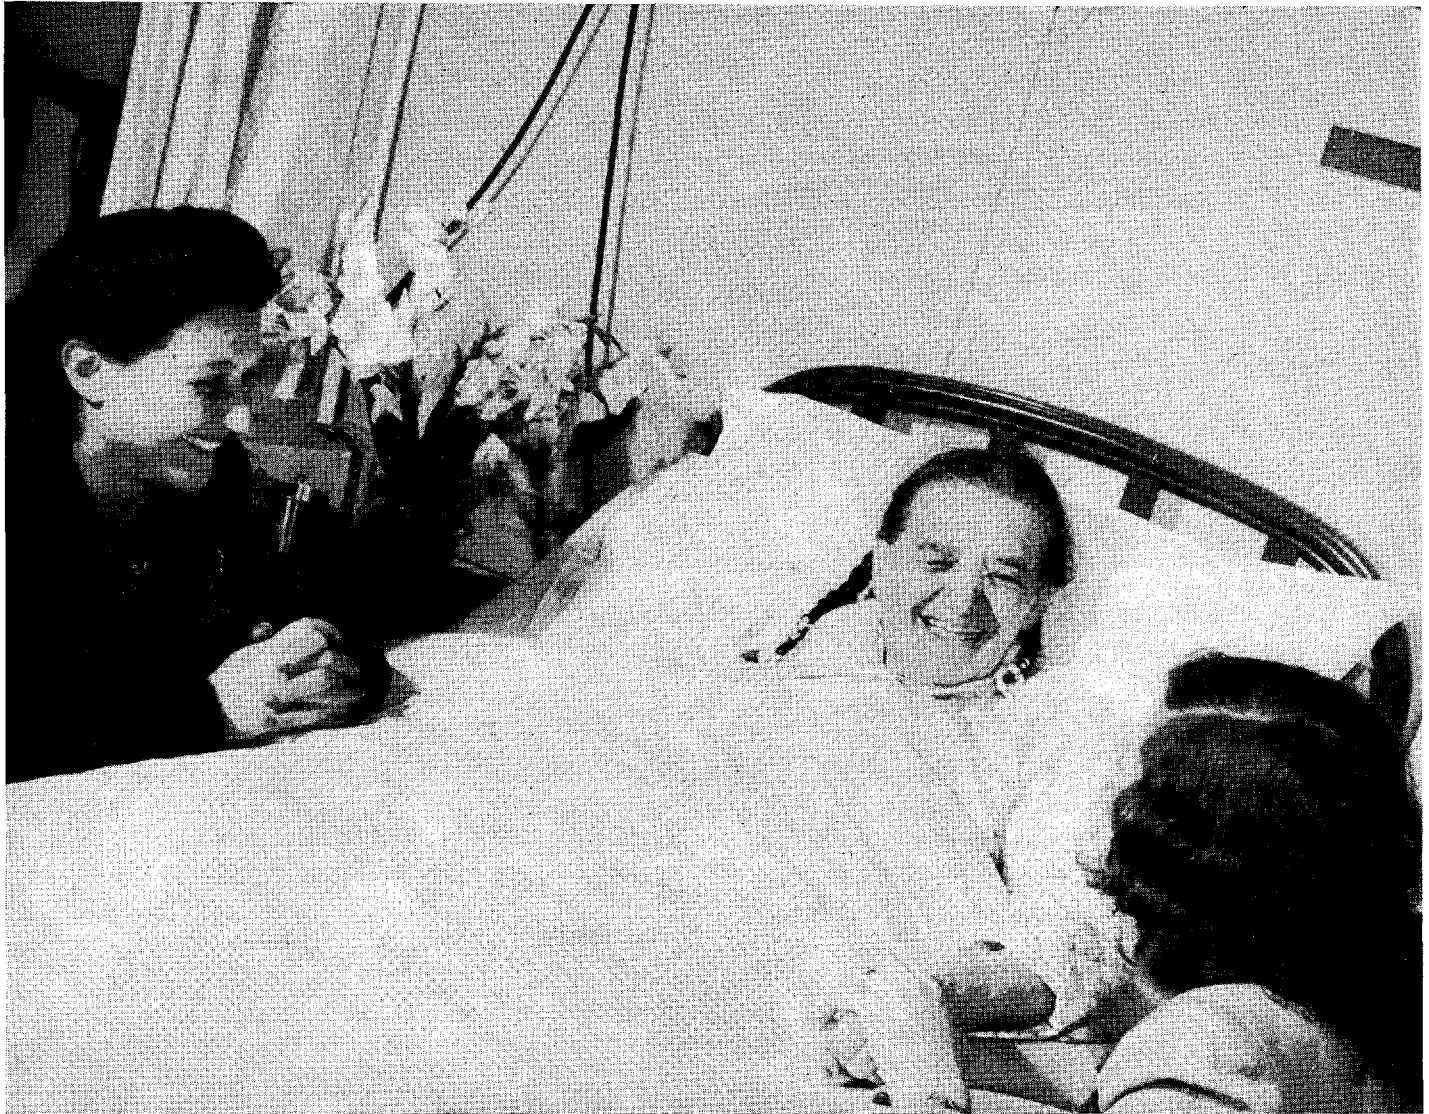

The story of the Beth Israel Hospital would not be complete without allusion to proposed expansion made possible by the generosity of several individuals who have pledged substantial funds for the erection of a private pavilion, in order that the demands which are constantly being made upon the Hospital for rooms may be, in a greater measure, met. Attention is called, also, to another generous benefactor, whose gift will make possible the erection of a laboratory building to house the clinical as well as the research laboratories of the institution.

Once again, too, we must pay tribute to the Life Membership Fund of the Ladies' Auxiliary which has committed itself to the construction of adequate maternity facilities, in order to meet the great need for this type of service.

As the Associated Jewish Philanthropies celebrate the Fiftieth Anniversary of the founding of organized Jewish charity in Boston, we at the Hospital bow in humble tribute to the 200 men and women of our Staff who are in the armed forces, serving their country.

Boston's Community Service For the Chronic Sick

by LOUIS E. HELLMANN, President, Jewish Memorial Hospital

DEDICATED to the care of the chronic ill, the Jewish Memorial Hospital stands as the only Jewish Hospital of its kind in New England. Comparatively new, the Hospital has in a short span of less than twenty years firmly established itself as a haven of mercy and healing for a community of over 125,000 Jewish men and women.

This institution, situated at 45 Townsend Street, Roxbury, is a growing monument and inspiration to a people of compassion and sympathy for the afflicted and the needy. It is a monument, too, to the pioneering spirit of the Roxbury Ladies' Bickur Cholim Association whose vision led to the founding of the Greater Boston Bickur Cholim Hospital, the forerunner to the Jewish Memorial Hospital.

The Jewish Memorial Hospital was formally dedicated in May 1929, in the same building that once housed the old Beth Israel Hospital. And, just as the late Oscar Grosberg was among those who helped establish the Beth Israel Hospital, so did the late Mrs. Grosberg help in the acquisition of the home for the Bickur Cholim Hospital. It is no coincidence that their son, Casper M. Grosberg, should now be serving as the chairman of the board of managers of the Jewish Memorial Hospital.

When the Jewish Memorial Hospital was opened, its twenty-six beds were inadequate to meet the communal demands. Thus, shortly after the dedication, President Philip J. Marget — now the institution's honorary president — appealed to the community for help to launch on an expansion program.

The Jewish community was fully aware of the important work that the Hospital was performing for the unfortunate patients of the community. Its humanitarian service moved the hearts of Boston Jewry who readily supported an expansion program. In 1936, a three-story annex was dedicated, increasing the hospital's capacity to eighty-two beds.

Since then the hospital has steadily kept pace with the scientific developments in medicine and surgery. It has increased and improved its facilities so that today it is regarded as a modern institution with an up-to-date operating suite, clinical and research laboratories, an eye infirmary, a fully equipped dental department, X-ray, physio-therapy, and orthopedic facilities. Its standards have enabled the Jewish Memorial Hospital to become affiliated with the Tufts College Medical School, whose faculty and students find it a valuable training source.

The Hospital has admitted 1900 patients since its opening. The physical condition of hundreds has improved to such an extent that they have been discharged and are now continuing their rightful place in society as useful members of the community.

The Medical Staff organized by the late Drs. Simon Richmond and Maurice Gerstein and now headed by Dr. Henry Baker includes a group of forty prominent physicians of Greater Boston, most of them affiliated with the medical schools of Boston University, Harvard, and Tufts. Twelve physicians make ward rounds daily, scores of others are serving as consultants in their various specialties. The entire Staff meets regularly to discuss the individual problems and progress of each patient.

The Hospital staff is headed by a Superintendent and includes a resident physician, an interne, a trained dietitian, a laboratory technician, a physiotherapist, and an X-ray technician. The national nursing shortage notwithstanding, the Hospital has been fortunate to have a sufficient number of nurses to care properly for its patients. It is worth noting that the Jewish Memorial Hospital also has a Superintendent of Nursing who directs the work of the graduate nurses, graduate attendants, and orderlies.

The various auxiliaries of the Hospital — the Junior Auxiliary, the Brookline Auxiliary, the West End Auxiliary, the Chelsea Auxiliary and the Men's Association — have enabled the institution continually to undertake new improvements and install new and modern equipment.

Jewish Memorial Hospital facilities are available to patients suffering from the chronic phases of such ailments as heart disease, high blood pressure, stomach disorders, diabetes, arthritis, tumors, and many other diseases which require prolonged medical care. No contagious or mental patients are ever accepted.

Admissions are based on the patient's need for the care which the hospital provides and not necessarily on the patient's ability to pay. If, for example, two patients with similar ailments seek admission, preference is given to the one who cannot pay.

The care of the chronic sick is primarily a problem of philanthropy. Three out of every four patients receive free care, in addition to the various laboratory and other services necessary. While the average stay of a patient in an acute hospital is fourteen days, the average stay of a patient at the Jewish Memorial Hospital is six months. Some patients have been at the institution for several years. Their average age is fifty-five, but there are a few who are under twenty.

From the day of its founding, the Jewish Memorial Hospital has been striving constantly to render a humane service to the community. To carry out its objective it is naturally necessary to have at its disposal adequate financial support in order to be able to provide the high type of service the community expects and to carry on research. The finances required to carry on the work of the Jewish Memorial Hospital are met by annual allocations from the Associated Jewish Philanthropies and the various auxiliaries. Additional income is derived from membership dues, from Life Membership Funds, and income from endowment funds.

As the pioneer Jewish hospital for the chronic sick in New England, the Jewish Memorial Hospital proudly looks back to the many years of valued service rendered to those who needed it most. It looks forward, too, to the future with hope, courage, and determination to increase its facilities so that it may give more help where it is needed without delay and in such a manner that the recipient can truly feel that someone sincerely cares about him and his well-being.

Twenty-Eight Years Of Jewish Education In Boston

by LOUIS HURWICH,
Dean, Hebrew Teachers College and Superintendent, Bureau of Jewish Education

There Is No End to Jewish Scholarship

JEWISH education was hard to sell in 1917. Normally, people strive to educate their children in order to insure continuity of tradition. In periods of serious social, economic, or political change, people are at a loss. The old ways and values lose part of their effectiveness; new ways are as yet uncharted. In the meantime, people grope about; disappointment prevails.

Throughout the ages, the education of the young among Jews followed traditional paths. The "cheder" — the private Hebrew school — always controlled by wide-awake public opinion, was very effective. It trained generations of children in terms of religious faith and observances, moral behavior, love of knowledge, and a hope for a better day for all humanity.

This was in the "old country." However, in America, at the beginning of this century, this instrument of instruction lost its effectiveness. The many differences between conditions of Jewish life in Europe and in democratic America required many adjustments. Active Jewish consciousness had to be kept alive. But, whereas the old "cheder" was the only school a child attended, in America the public school took up most of the child's hours and energy. Time, content, and method remained the unsolved problems. The individual school was helpless. Only in a community-wide program, supported by community effort could there be hope for some solution.

A movement to spread the idea of wider cooperation and planning in Jewish education was started by the Jewish Education Society, organized in 1915. (Surviving members of this Society include: Judge A. K. Cohen, A. S. Hirshberg, Dr. Leon S. Medalia, A. A. Hurwitz, and Rabbi H. H. Rubenovitz.) In May, 1917, Louis Hurwich was invited to study Jewish Education in Boston. He found twelve Hebrew schools with a total registration of 1,531, and thirteen Sunday schools, with an enrollment of 1,934 students. Several schools were modeled after the old-time "cheder," with most of its faults and none of its advantages. Others, especially the Evrio in the West End, deserved high ranking. All the schools were housed in remodeled residences or in basement rooms of synagogues.

The survey also showed that, due to the teacher shortage, instruction was, for the most part, in the hands of boys and girls in their 'teens, with salaries extremely low. There was no standard curriculum and little planning by the schools. (The budget for all the Hebrew schools was $32,000, for the Sunday school $6,213.) The methods of raising funds were inefficient and humiliating. However, there was one rallying point — the Hebrew Teachers' Association which offered opportunity for teachers' meetings and for discussions of educational and professional problems.

In October, 1917, the Hebrew schools formed the Associated Boston Hebrew Schools, with Herman Lowenberg as its first president and Louis Hurwich as superintendent. In the fall of 1918, the Bureau of Jewish Religious Schools was organized. Rabbi H. H. Rubenovitz was elected president and Rabbi Hyman Solomon superintendent.

The survey emphasized that religious education is a community responsibility and merited community planning and support. This, the report counseled, should be undertaken by a central educational agency. Mr. Hurwich also stressed the importance of preserving local initiative and interest, urged the raising of physical and educational standards, and advocated the development of a uniform curriculum for all the Hebrew schools.

The above plans were accepted by the Federated Jewish Charities which, in January, 1918, allocated $20,000 for the Hebrew schools and $10,000 for the Sunday schools.

The curtailment of immigration from Europe, during the first World War, created a shortage of competent instructors for the Hebrew and Sunday Schools. With the help of the Federated, however, certain improvements were instituted. A Hebrew Teachers' Training School was started in April, 1918; teachers' salaries were increased; the opening of new schools was encouraged; and the erection of new school buildings was advocated.

Young Women as Well as Men Nowadays Study the Talmud

Additional progress was made with the adoption of a uniform curriculum and standardized educational practices, which were enacted by the Hebrew Principals' Association. The undesirable practices of financing schools through such means as box collections were eliminated. Similar progress was made by the Sunday Schools. Paid teachers replaced volunteers; courses of instruction became standardized; special classes were started for the training of additional teachers; and more Sunday Schools were opened in the South End, Roxbury, and Dorchester.

In the spring of 1920, the Associated Boston Hebrew Schools and the Bureau of Jewish Religious Schools merged into the Bureau of Jewish Education. Dr. Medalia was its first president. He served until 1926, when he was succeeded by the late Professor Nathan Isaacs, who held the office until his death in 1942. From its inception, to the present, the Bureau has been under the direction of Mr. Hurwich as superintendent.

When the Hebrew Teachers' Training School proved inadequate for Boston's needs, the Bureau of Jewish Education proposed that a Hebrew Teachers College, offering a four-year course, be established. The Federated approved the project and promised to support it. As a result, a building was bought at 14 Crawford Street, Roxbury, and on November 27, 1921, with Dr. Nissan Touraff, noted Palestinian educator, as dean, the College began its first session.

Through the years, the Hebrew Teachers College succeeded in attracting high-grade student material. It helped to maintain high educational standards in the Hebrew Schools. It raised the general prestige of Jewish education and slowly became a center of constructive influence. Leading American colleges and universities now grant credit for courses taken at the Hebrew Teachers College.

In 1923, a Hebrew High School was started as part of the Hebrew Teachers College program. In 1927, the State legislature authorized the College to confer degrees of Bachelor, Master and Doctor of Hebrew Literature, of Hebrew Laws, and of Jewish Education. Since 1925, when the College sent out its first group of graduates, it has trained 168 young men and women. Today, about seventy-five per cent of the Jewish pupils in Greater Boston Hebrew Schools are taught by graduates of this College.

Steady progress has been made in the field of Jewish education in Boston. Through local initiative, a chain of modern school buildings was constructed during 1921-1929. Uniform achievement tests, for prospective Hebrew School graduates, were introduced in 1923. A standard curriculum was adopted in 1925 and, in the same year, High School Extension classes were organized. Adult Extension classes as well as courses for Sunday School teachers and club leaders were started in 1932. An annual Women's Conference on Jewish Education was begun in 1935.

In 1943 release-time classes were started in Roxbury in cooperation with the Associated Synagogues of Greater Boston. In 1944 Yavneh, the College Summer School and Camp opened in Northwood, New Hampshire, offering a combination of Jewish education and recreational and spiritual experiences.

Jewish education is the very foundation of Jewish consciousness. Only through proper exercise of Jewish education did every generation of Jews through the Diaspora succeed in creating and maintaining the high degree of morale which gave Jews strength to face the vicissitudes which befell them since the destruction of the Temple 1800 years ago. In order to continue this source of strength, Jewish teaching must be maintained as an attractive profession, offering to the ablest among the Jewish youth a career of advancement and of community status.

The part played by the Associated Jewish Philanthropies in financing the many efforts of the Bureau of Jewish Education and the Hebrew Teachers College is a golden page in the history of the Jewish people of Greater Boston. The success of the past is now a challenge to even greater effort. More attention must be given to youth and adult education. There must be more cooperation with synagogues and with other community institutions to develop a total community program of Jewish education.

Judaism is a way of life, extending through life. Jewish education through its various forms always functioned from the cradle to the grave. The need of constant emotional stability and a sense of constant spiritual security makes it imperative to re-institute that multi-form of education, no matter what changes in garb and methodology modern conditions may impose upon us.

New Venture in Community Social Planning

by WALTER H. BIERINGER, President
Jewish Centers Association of Greater Boston

IN a turbulent war period, the leadership of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies became increasingly concerned about the Jewish youth of the community. Press and radio reports, as well as other educational and propaganda media, all warned the nation of the dangers of family breakdowns and stressed the need for developing programs for the young men and young women of our land.

To determine how the Jewish youth of this region was withstanding the stress and strain of wartime conditions and all their concomitant problems, the AJP's Plans and Scope Committee created a Youth Section to study the situation as it affected Boston's Jewish young people.

The findings of the Plans and Scope Youth Section showed that Jewish youngsters manifested a certain restlessness and general dissatisfaction. They found, too, that Jewish youths were concerned about their Jewish origins and about their relationships to the rest of the community. Also disclosed in the survey was the fact that many youngsters were dropping out of schools to capitalize on the employment boom and, finally, that many of them were spending excessive sums of money for their recreational and social activities, frequently in unwholesome surroundings.

To remedy these conditions, the Youth Section surveyed existing leisure-time agencies and considered how well their programs met the needs and desires of the Jewish boys and girls, as well as the interests of the adult members of the community in search of recreational and cultural opportunities in proper and congenial environments.

The Youth Section, aided by the National Jewish Welfare Board, found that these leisure time resources were not available to all communities of large Jewish population concentration. Hecht Neighborhood House in Dorchester, the report showed, and the Boston Young Men's Hebrew Association in Roxbury, were rendering important services to their respective communities. On the other hand, areas such as Mattapan, Brookline, Allston, and Brighton showed a definite need for special services and programs in the leisure-time area.

As a move to expand the services for youth, the AJP's Youth Section recommended the creation of an organization that would plan and integrate recreational and cultural activities, geared to help youth to a deeper understanding and appreciation of their Jewish backgrounds and of their place in the total community. As a result, the Jewish Centers Association of Greater Boston came into being in January, 1945.

The aim of the Jewish Centers Association is to provide, qualitatively and quantitatively, a high type of center services in those Jewish communities indicating a need and a desire for such services. Thus, for example, when the Mattapan community voiced a need for special summertime recreational opportunities for children, the Centers Association, in cooperation with a representative Mattapan committee, worked out a plan whereby such a program would be established.

Creating of new resources wherever needed by the Jewish people is not the only function of the Jewish Centers Association. In a sense, it may be referred to as an over-all planning and coordinating agency serving not only existing agencies such as Hecht House and the Young Men's Hebrew Association, but ready to serve all Jewish youth organizations, regardless of their individual ideologies. The Association's major concern is also to help develop in the Jewish youth of the community a more creative and more wholesome approach to Jewish life and to help them become an integral part of the total community.

Boston's Jewish community is one of the very few in the country to undertake such a program as the Jewish Centers Association plans to operate. The progress of the Association will, therefore, be keenly observed and studied by other Jewish communities interested in their youth. The success of the Jewish Centers Association of Greater Boston, however, will rest on the degree of cooperation rendered the organization by those in the community with a devoted interest in our greatest assets — the youth of today.

House Council Is Training Ground for Democratic Group Life

At Home In Hecht House

by HAROLD E. BERNKOPF, President
Hecht Neighborhood House

IN the three-story brick structure that once housed the Home for Jewish Children, a building set well back off American Legion Highway and fronting the rolling greens of Franklin Park, stands Hecht Neighborhood House, the mecca for thousands of Dorchester's Jewish men, women and children in quest of leisure time, cultural activities, and recreation.

On any night of the week, except Friday, hundreds of Dorchester's citizenry, young and old, of all economic levels, flock to Hecht House to spend their after-school and after-work time. Hecht House to them is a natural turning point, for the House program is such that it meets the interests of every member.

Hecht House is a veritable beehive of activity from early morning, when the young toddlers start their Nursery School classes, to late in the evening when teen-agers and adults head for home after an evening of fun and relaxation. And fun to Hecht House members runs the gamut of a jitterbug dance in the youth canteen, which was organized at the request of the community, to a workout in the gymnasium or a heated discussion about the best ways of achieving world peace.

The House serves as the focal point where members of this district gather to solve mutual problems. These problems may center around such commonplace subjects as the high cost of food, anti-social outbreaks in the neighborhood, housing, and the quality of the schools in the district. No topic that is the warp and woof of our every day life fails to be touched by the people who come to the House "to talk things over."

The modern Hecht Neighborhood House is an outgrowth of the old Hebrew Industrial School for girls, founded in 1889 by the late Mrs. Jacob H. Hecht, the highly esteemed "Aunt Lina" of her contemporaries and one of the most generous women of her day. Situated at first in rented rooms on Hanover Street, the School had a nomadic existence, moving four times until Mrs. Hecht willed the institution a residence on 22 Bowdoin Street. In 1922, the School became known as "Hecht Neighborhood House."

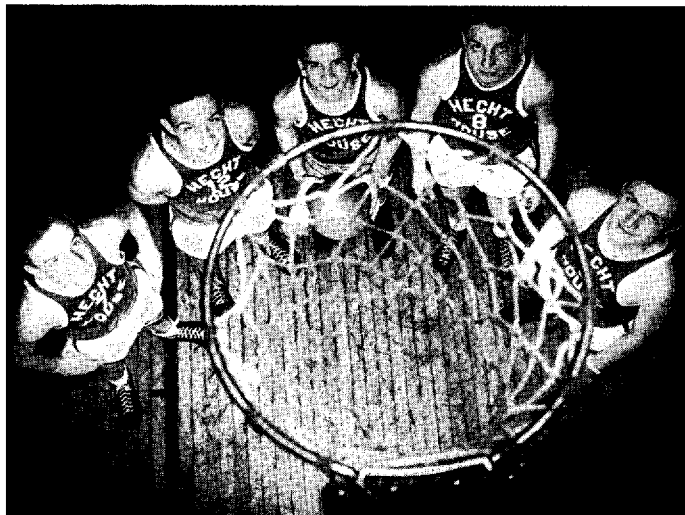

Under the leadership of Mrs. Hecht's son-in-law, Louis Hecht, the late Dr. Henry Ehrlich, and Mrs. Henry Ehrlich, Hecht Neighborhood House underwent an important expansion in its program. During this period, the Ladies Auxiliary, which Aunt Lina had founded in 1903, played an important role in supporting the development of a varied program that met a common need among the Jewish people of the North and West Ends of Boston.

With the shift in the Jewish population from these districts, Hecht Neighborhood House began to seek new and more spacious quarters. The House acquired the large building which had been occupied by the Home for Jewish Children and immediately launched on a remodelling program, which included the construction of a modern gymnasium.

By 1936 the building was opened for occupancy, and almost immediately the Dorchester Jewish community began to make use of its newest recreational-cultural resource. Within a short time, a Neighborhood Group came into being, comprised of women who take a vital interest in the every day progress of the House which has now become a veritable community center. The Group and the Auxiliary are indispensable organizations to this thriving agency.

Hecht House does more than try to meet the athletic and recreational needs of the people in the community. Although it conducts no formalized religious training program, it does strive to inculcate in the minds and hearts of each member an appreciation for the great tradition that is Judaism's. Accordingly, it conducts special forums related to matters Jewish. It sponsors social clubs interested in Jewish history, art, and folk dancing. Its Purim and Chanukah festivals are becoming traditional functions in the community.

Hecht House is unique, too, in that during its 56

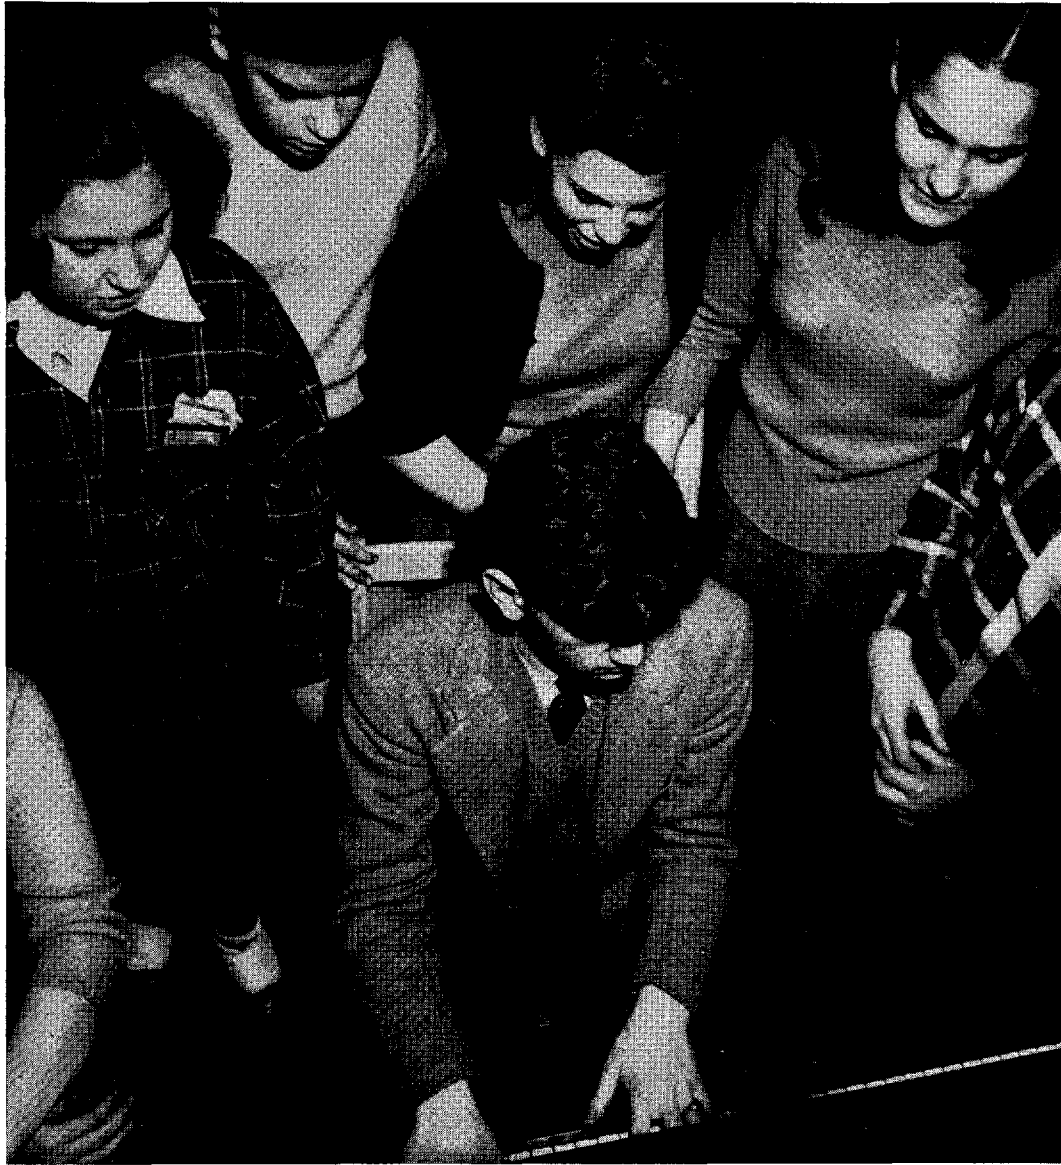

Win or Lose, They Play Clean

years of existence it has been blessed with continuous leadership by three persons who have served as executive director. Miss Golde Bamber served until her retirement in 1930 when she was succeeded by Mrs. Harry R. Saftel. Our present executive director, Edward Sidman, has been with the House for 22 years, the past two in his current capacity. The community will always feel grateful to them for their devotion and service. They and the hundreds of men and women who toiled as volunteer workers have helped transform Hecht House into an institution that helps all become better Americans and better Jews.

One of the most important phases of Hecht House activity is the House Council which represents each of the fifty clubs and which helps guide the professional staff in its programming. The House Council, however, is more than just a guide to the staff. To be sure this part of its work is important. But more important to the people connected with the house, both as paid workers and as volunteers and board members, is the Council's function as a training ground for democratic living.

Hecht House is particularly proud of the role which its members have played in the successful prosecution of the war. More than 3,000 Hecht House men and women are serving in the armed forces. They have been backed to the hilt by a current membership of 2,500 men, women and children who participate in every phase of the war effort.

As the armies of the United Nations approach the road of complete victory, Hecht House is planning, in cooperation with other agencies, ways of not only continuing its tradition of community service, but of serving the men and women who will be returning to civilian life. The energies of all will be directed to ease the servicemen's transition to normal, peacetime life.

There Is Music in the Hearts of These Young "Y" Members

Through The Years With The YMHA

by NATHAN A. HELLER, President
Boston Young Men's Hebrew Association

IN 1881 a group of young men in the South End, then a residential district for many well-to-do Jews, gathered to form the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Boston, as an expression by Jewish youth of their need for social fellowship. Similar organizations had been established in other large cities, and Boston, following precedent, declared the purpose of the YMHA to be "the moral, physical, intellectual, and social improvement" of its members.

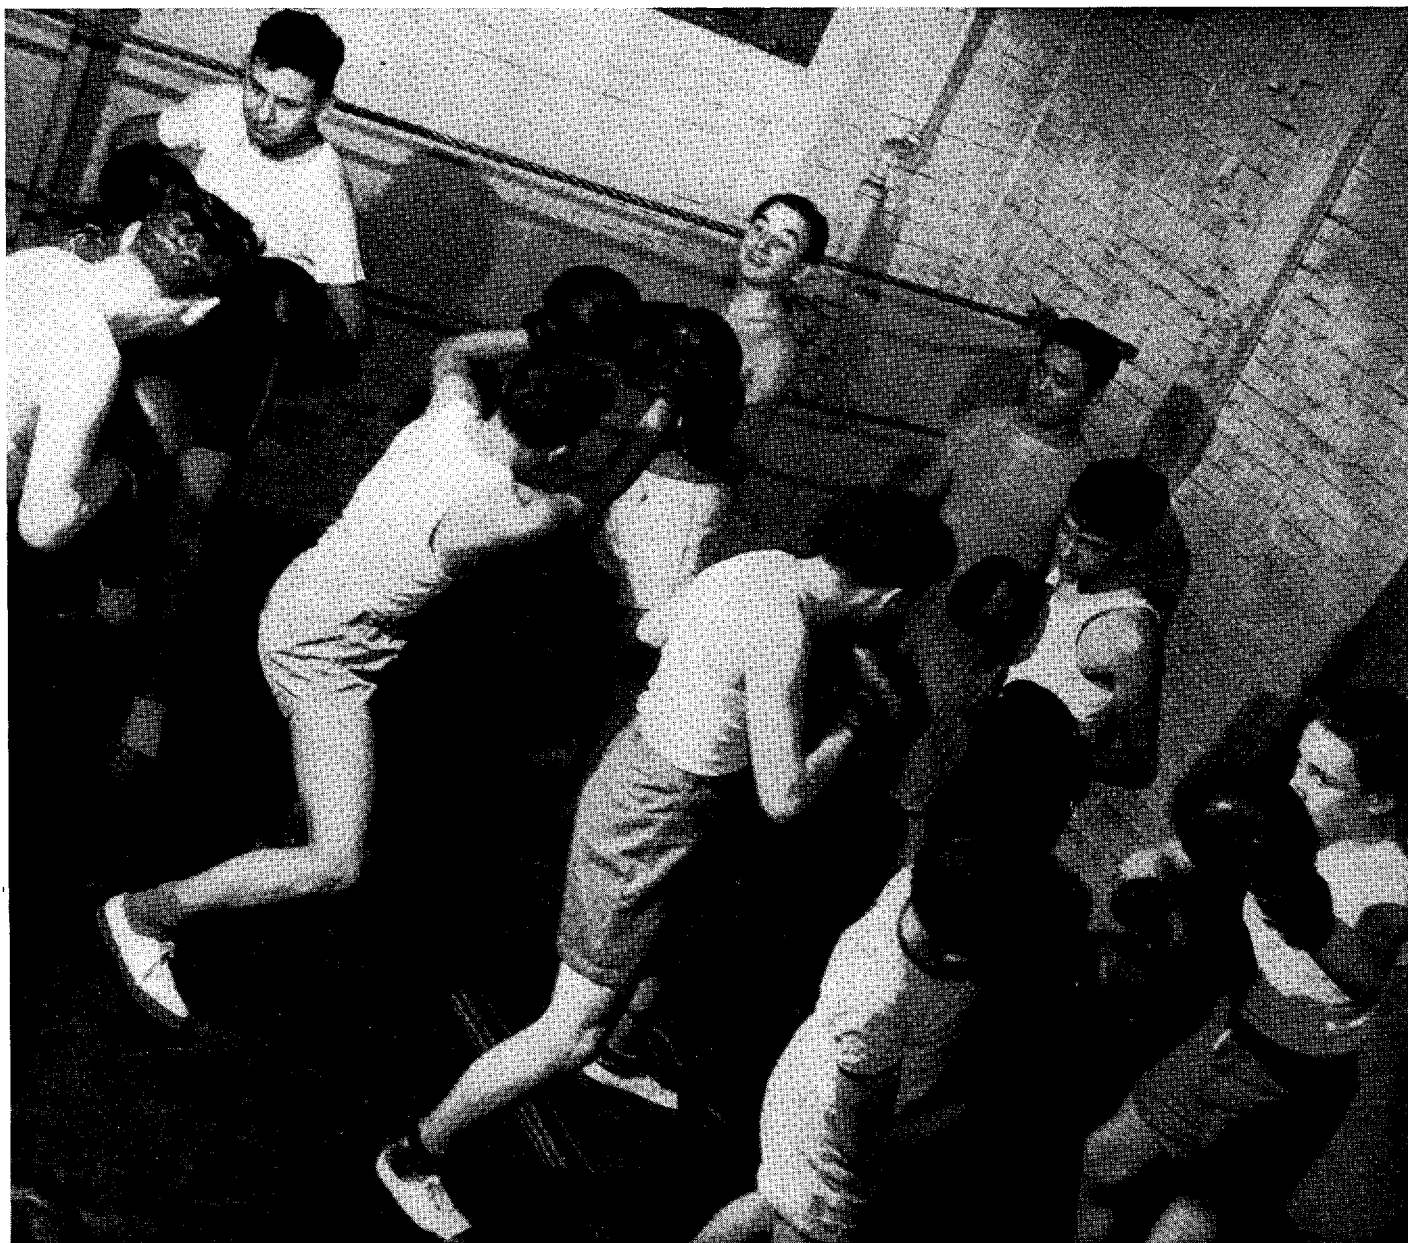

Acting swiftly and boldly at a time when the Jewish population of the city was probably less than 5000 and the prospect of support uncertain, the founders leased quarters in a building known as Minot Hall, at the corner of Washington and East Springfield Streets. Membership grew rapidly, to about 400, and as early as 1885 the organization began to look for more spacious quarters. A few years later the YMHA was given a house on East Concord Street where the Association, despite the lack of an auditorium and a gymnasium, conducted numerous activities — clubs, musicales, lectures, dramatics, publications, etc.

A shift of the Jewish population from the South End rendered the East Concord Street quarters of the YMHA inaccessible and in 1909 it was abandoned. In 1911 a score of young business and professional people reconstituted the YMHA and leased the old Hetty Green Mansion at the corner of Warren and Howland Streets in Roxbury. It was then that the leadership proclaimed that the primary aim of the YMHA was to aid in the preservation of Jewish group life, not merely as an end in itself but as a means of enriching the American cultural pattern and bringing dignity and self-respect to the American Jew.

The brevity of this article does not permit an extended recital of the way in which the YMHA served the community. Mention, however, must be made of the fact that the YMHA established a modern religious school, which served as a model for others in New England, until it was ceded to the Bureau of Jewish Education. Also, the YMHA organized modern Friday night services conducted by laymen but discontinued in 1918 when the Synagogues, recognizing their value, undertook the services under their own auspices. To the Boston YMHA also belongs the credit for organizing the New England Federation of YMHA's to strengthen Jewish consciousness.

The popularity of the YMHA program may be seen from the steady membership rise. In 1917 the Association had 1800 members, and once more the facilities of the YMHA became woefully inadequate. The same year, the YMHA bought a large mansion, centrally located at the corner of Seaver Street and Humboldt Avenue, Roxbury. In 1918 the Association again moved. The new home was completely outfitted with new furniture and equipment. Its quarters were more spacious than anything the Association had in the past.

By 1920 the Jewish population in the Roxbury-Dorchester area swelled to 50,000. Correspondingly, the YMHA membership mounted. It now became evident that the Y had to reorganize its program and to expand facilities. After engaging an executive director, the YMHA launched a fund-raising campaign in 1920. By 1924 it had raised $115,000 and the next year started construction of a much needed gymnasium.

The raising of $115,000 for the gymnasium was an outstanding accomplishment, being achieved not by a community-wide appeal but as the result of a determined effort to obtain relatively small contributions exclusively from those Jews in Roxbury and Dorchester who grasped the significance of the YMHA to the community. The unceasing endeavors of the members of the YMHA to establish and assert themselves had a truly wonderful affect on many of them, for it made for self-reliance and community spirit. It is not mere chance, therefore, that not a few of the outstanding leaders of the Jewish community today were once active leaders of the YMHA.

In the third decade of this century, residents of Roxbury and Dorchester were enjoying the fruits of mushroom prosperity and moved to Brookline, Brighton, Newton, and other sections. Many had been contributors and members of the YMHA, paying dues which represented an important part of the YMHA income. Hence, when they left, the revenue of the Association dropped. As a result, in 1928, the YMHA became a member of the Federated Jewish Charities. For the first few years of its affiliation, the sums received covered only a small part of the budget. As the depression of the 1930's deepened, the YMHA called upon the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, successor of the Federated, for larger annual subventions.

Today the YMHA receives from the AJP about two-thirds of its budget requirements. This unusually high percentage is attributable, in part, to the fact that the armed forces have taken about 500 of its members who, of course, are not required to pay dues. This decline in revenue has been aggravated by the loss of considerable income which in peacetime is derived from basketball games, bowling and billiards.

The YMHA program, which includes about a hundred varied clubs and activities, reaches both sexes and all ages. In recent years, to offset the absence of male members who are in the armed services and to make the YMHA a thoroughly representative organization, determined efforts to enroll adult women members have been successfully made. Today, of the total membership of about 2000, adults constitute approximately fifty percent.

The YMHA clubs and membership performed valuable service to the community during the war emergency. Members participated in every phase of the war effort. Undoubtedly, the contribution of the YMHA to the nation will be cherished above everything else. It has contributed over 500 members to the armed forces. Eleven of these have made the supreme sacrifice, in the cause of freedom. These figures speak eloquently not only of the deep sense of duty but of the prime physical and mental fitness of the YMHA members.

It is a comforting assurance that in the hands of men and women such as these America will continue to translate into action with ever increasing effectiveness the imperishable ideals upon which its mighty Republic was founded. Both the nation and the Jewish community of Boston will always continue to find in the Young Men's Hebrew Association a useful agency for meeting the needs, the aspirations, hopes, and ideals of the people.

A-1 Priority . . . The Services

by

ALBERT HURWITZ, Chairman

Greater Boston JWB Army and Navy Committee

Future WAVES Get A Hearty JWB Sendoff

LESS than a month after the enactment of the National Selective Service Act in September, 1940, representatives of leading Jewish organizations in Greater Boston, spurred on by the New England Section of the Jewish Welfare Board, met and created the Greater Boston Jewish Welfare Board Army and Navy Committee. This was the first Committee of its kind in the country, and its record over the past five years is one which few Jewish communities in America can equal or surpass.

Long before the Nation was attacked by the Japanese, and even prior to the creation of the Greater Boston Soldiers and Sailors Committee with whom the Committee is affiliated, this community had begun to prepare for the Jewish servicemen stationed in this region. These plans were undertaken after a careful survey of Army cantonments, bases, and the resources available in the various communities to meet the many needs and interests of Jewish men in uniform.

Armed with information on the probable number of Jewish men who would be stationed at the different camps and naval bases, the Greater Boston JWB Army and Navy Committee launched upon the development of a chain of subcommittees in the Greater Boston area and adjoining communities. It is to the everlasting credit of each city and town in this area that the Committee was granted unsurpassed cooperation, without which its entire undertaking in behalf of the servicemen could not have attained its high degree of popularity.

JWB Hospital Guests Are Topflight Entertainers

The first Committee, naturally, was a Religious and Holiday Celebrations Committee, which arranges for religious services for the Jewish men stationed at the various harbor defenses and distributes prayer books and other materials issued by the National Jewish Welfare Board. Thus, men stationed at Fort Banks, Fort Dawes, and Fort Heath have been attending regular Friday night services at Temple Tifereth Israel in Winthrop, whose community lavishly cared also for the social needs of the servicemen. It also arranges for celebration of the various Jewish holidays, as well as for visitations by members of the Rabbinical Association, to Jewish men confined in hospitals in this area.

One of the most outstanding programs undertaken by the Committee is hospital ward visitation and hospital entertainment, a program becoming increasingly important with the large influx of wounded men to the hospital facilities of this region. So effective have the programs of the Hospital Visitation Committee and that of the Hospital Entertainment Committee been that today the Greater Boston JWB Army and Navy Committee is the only U.S.O. agency in Greater Boston that has received full recognition and acceptance in this particular phase of service, both by the Red Cross and by the military authorities.

The Hospital Visitation and the Hospital Entertainment Committees have done more than provide every wounded patient with a package of cigarettes; for example, the latter committee provides entertainment of a high standard and grants special gifts to the ailing GI's. From an organizational viewpoint, these committees have also rendered important service by coordinating the entire visitation and entertainment program of most of the brotherhoods, sisterhoods, fraternal orders, and special clubs of this community.

Ever ready to meet the changing needs of the men and women in uniform, the Committee established a College and University Committee to serve the men stationed in local colleges under the Army Student Training Program.

When the WACs were organized, the JWB created a Committee on Women in Service. More recently, the Serve-A-Camp program, which has won the praises of GI's of all races and creeds, became a Serve-A-Chaplain program. With this undertaking, a chaplain in the European Theatre of Operations received, as does a chaplain in the Pacific area now also accept special gifts for his men, regardless of their racial or religious background, before the fighting men enter the field of combat.

In Boston, the JWB discovered early in 1943 that there was need for a special resource for officers. Accordingly, an Officers Dance Committee was organized and, almost from the day it was founded, special dances for officers have been conducted twice monthly at the Hotel Lenox.

Without a doubt, one of the most important problems facing the JWB is that of the veteran. To prepare for the day when Jewish men and women are released from the services, the JWB has joined with other communal agencies to plan ways and means of providing special services to the Jewish men.

It is impossible in so short an article to do more than scratch the surface of the multi-formed phases of work performed by the scores of committees and subcommittees of the Greater Boston JWB Army and Navy Committee. In all fairness, however, it is important that tribute be paid to the thousands and thousands of Jewish men and women, in all the communities, who have opened their hearts and their pocketbooks to see to it that Boston did her share for the servicemen. The Combined Jewish Appeal has supported the various endeavors of the Committee since 1943, but up to that date, the cost of operating its manifold program was met by the score of organizations and the many public-spirited men and women.

Admiral Theobold Helps JWB Celebrate WAVE Birthday

The Greater Boston JWB Army and Navy Committee is a symbol of the Jewish community's generosity, its interest in and devotion to the men and women who fight for a better world. The lives of thousands of servicemen, Jews and non-Jews, have been enriched because of the deep concern which the Jews of this community have shown for their fellow men.

Let us hope that this spirit will continue always.

The Unsung Heroes and Heroines On The Homefront

by PAUL SIMONS, Chairman, House Management Committee JWB Army and Navy Club

They Also Serve Who Only Sit and Sew for the Men in Uniform

SOME day, when the history of World War II is written, a chapter should be devoted to the unsung heroes and heroines — the USO volunteers — serving the JWB-USO at 17 Commonwealth Avenue and representing the best in community volunteer organizations.

Approximately one thousand volunteer workers, enrolled from all the Greater Boston area, staff this institution, under the guidance of a House Management Committee. Canteen workers, Junior Hostesses and Junior Aids, Senior Hostesses, Men volunteers, Photography experts, Arts and Crafts instructors, and miscellaneous committee members make up this army of loyal and enthusiastic volunteers. A spirit of comradeship and good will among the workers has constantly expanded during the two and a half years of the Club's operation.

Servicemen frequently remark that they sense a feeling of warmth as soon as they enter and that this spirit of friendliness boosts their morale. Mothers, dads, wives, sweethearts, sisters and brothers of service people, who make up the volunteer organization, see in every boy who enters the counterpart of their loved one in uniform. Quite a number of gold stars are carried in the hearts of volunteers in every department of service. Is there any wonder that serving at 17 Commonwealth Avenue is considered an honor, a privilege, and a sacred obligation? Perhaps no influence had done more to bolster the morale of volunteers than the opportunities afforded there for constructive service.

Let us take a brief trip to the Club. This is a true story, typical of countless other experiences. A Sergeant in the Air Corps entered one Sunday morning, along with the usual stream of guests. A smiling Senior Hostess greeted him. He was a clean-cut, well-built lad from a small, distant town. Like many others who come into the Club, he appeared tired and rather depressed.

"How late may I sleep?" he asked.

He was informed he could use the bed until 10:30 a.m. Monday, and was assigned a small room on the fifth floor, a nice, quiet location. He did not care to have a letter sent home to his folks, but seemed appreciative of this offer. He checked his bag and valuables, and without glancing at the reservation slip handed him, a slip indicating the many additional services available, proceeded upstairs.

Relaxation in Arts and Crafts

For Some Serious Work — the JWB Library

With the natural intuition exhibited by all the boys, the Sergeant gravitated to the canteen where pleasant, uniformed "Canteeners" served him fruit juice and coffee. He could also have had cereal with cream, milk, "lox" and "bagels," cream cheese, marmalade, coffee cake, doughnuts, rolls, etc. — at a total cost of fifteen cents, but it was apparent his appetite was not up to par. About an hour later, the Senior Hostess at the information desk, who happened to be the OD (Officer of the Day), noticed this young man pacing up and down like a caged animal.

"You look as if you don't know which way to head," she remarked to him. "How would you like to just rest in a garden, with no one to bother you or ask you questions?"

He expressed interest and the Senior Hostess invited him to use the grounds of her house for the remainder of the day.

"There are some books you might like to read in our library and there is food in the icebox if you want it, but just do as you please. Mother will be at home and will expect you."

He accepted. After several days of complete relaxation he explained voluntarily his strange behavior.

"Our plane crashed and three of my closest friends were killed. I was given a furlough, but I just couldn't face the folks. I wanted to go to a place where I knew no one, where no questions could be asked, and where I could pull myself together. A fellow who used to fly with me suggested this club. You will never know what you have done for me."

Statistics can be dull, but when they relate to life, service and action, they take on added meaning. Since its opening in January, 1943, the Club has been visited by 288,580 members of the armed forces, sixty per cent of these being non-Jews. The Club's canteen, a legend among service people, has served 231,417 servicemen and women. Overnight lodging was provided to more than 50,000, and 11,932 free photographs were taken, developed, and mailed to parents and friends of servicemen. In addition, the Club secured housing accommodations for 832. It is interesting to note that despite the decline in the number of service personnel stationed in this area, the Club recently achieved its top attendance record when, during one month, over 12,000 men and women of the armed forces were clocked. The Club is particularly proud, too, of the "purple hearts" dinners which it has been conducting regularly, twice monthly, for men convalescing at Camp Edwards and of its photography program to other camps and hospitals where servicemen are recovering from wounds and injuries.

Junior Hostesses have not only served as dancing partners, but have given invaluable aid in programming. Male volunteers play an important role in many capacities — making voice recordings, checking coats, assisting in the canteen, acting as masters of ceremonies, etc. The Arts and Crafts Committee has made USO history.

The House Management Committee is a hard working group, consisting of the heads of volunteer and functioning committees. The example set by its loyal and devoted members has been an inspiration to all. It is significant that this committee has remained intact since the day the Club was organized and has been on duty despite many difficulties and obstacles.

The Boston JWB Army and Navy Club, supported and maintained by the Combined Jewish Appeal, and under the auspices of the Jewish Welfare Board, is a contribution of the entire Jewish community of Greater Boston to the war effort. The amount of good will created and the scope of its influence can only partially be essayed by this brief report.

They Will Carry Pleasant Memories of JWB Experiences to All Corners of the World

Social Values of Modern Gemilath Chasodim

by JUDGE ABRAHAM E. PINANSKI

President, Hebrew Free Loan Society of Boston

THE Hebrew Free Loan Society of Boston is a potent force for constructive service in our community. It is a most effective preventive against the necessity for rendering relief in that it gives timely and friendly temporary assistance to those in need of financial help. Mindful of the Biblical admonition in Exodus: "If thou lend money to the poor thou shalt not lay upon him usury," it lends money to worthy applicants, irrespective of their race, color or creed, to be repaid in small convenient installments, free of interest or other charges.

The Hebrew Free Loan Society of Boston was founded in October, 1912, by a small group of Jewish citizens who had vision and were steeped in the Jewish tradition of Gemilath Chasodim (the Hebrew for "performing acts of loving kindness"). They knew that timely assistance given to those in need of financial help enabled the latter to weather the storm, preserve their self-respect and self-dependence and escape becoming charges upon the community. Keenly sensitive of the brotherhood of man, these pioneers in constructive philanthropy extended their sphere of charitable activity to include as the recipients of their beneficence, non-Jews as well as Jews, although the capital of the Loan Fund was contributed by Jews only and Jewish funds maintained the organization.

More and more, the people of our community are beginning to appreciate the full value and extent of the work which the Society has been doing. The records show that many small businessmen have been saved from bankruptcy by the society's help during a period of financial stress; many have been enabled to pay their taxes on time, to purchase coal, to buy small stocks of merchandise, to pay medical and dental bills, to pay premiums so that their insurance might not lapse; and a number have been assisted in obtaining higher education. With funds borrowed from the Society, many have started small businesses which have grown and made their owners financially independent at a time when no job was available for them; many a doctor, dentist, or other professional man has been enabled to start his practice and, while it was still possible, many a refugee snatched a relation or friend from the concentration camp and certain death in Nazi Germany.

Many of those who received loans from the Society have become grateful friends, ardent supporters, and, in some cases, Life or Annual members of the organization. The pleasant experience of the Society over a period of five years with loans to refugees is especially noteworthy. All those whom the Society served met their obligations honorably. While they were establishing themselves in a new country and adjusting themselves to a new language, different customs and business practices, and while they were aiding relatives left behind, they repaid, nevertheless, thousands of dollars loaned to them on the mere endorsement of the Boston Committee for Refugees.

The original capital of the Society donated by its organizers was $2,500. It has grown to $120,000. This sum has been given to the Society since its organization by Jewish citizens of the community as Benefactors who donated $1,000 each, Founders who donated $500 each, and Life Members who donated $100 each. The first full year of work resulted in 193 loans totaling $15,105. The records of the Society show that, since its existence, 45,199 loans have been made to men and women in all walks of life for a total of $5,648,084. Losses on loans made have amounted to less than one-third of one per cent, — demonstrating that Gemilath Chasodim, coupled with the absence of any interest charge, “touches the character” of those whom the Society serves and makes for “conscience that will not die in debt.”

During the first seventeen years of its history, the Society maintained itself by the revenue received from its sustaining members and from sundry donations. In 1929 the Society became a constituent member of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, and for that year it received a subvention of $4,000. This budgetary allotment has been gradually increased so that the highest amount, received in 1942, was $8,650. In 1944 it received $7,000. The funds thus allotted go a long way towards maintaining the Society.

All cases referred to the Society by the Jewish Family Welfare Association receive immediate attention. In many cases, the combined staffs work out economic rehabilitation problems. The client thus gets the benefit of the experience of a professional social worker, as well as expert economic counsel. After conferences with the two agencies and after thorough and competent investigation, several clients whom the Family Welfare Society helped for many years were enabled to become economically independent by finding suitable jobs or opening a small business. Of great importance is the psychological factor. New courage to meet the economic struggle was instilled in the hearts of dejected clients and new vistas were opened up for them.

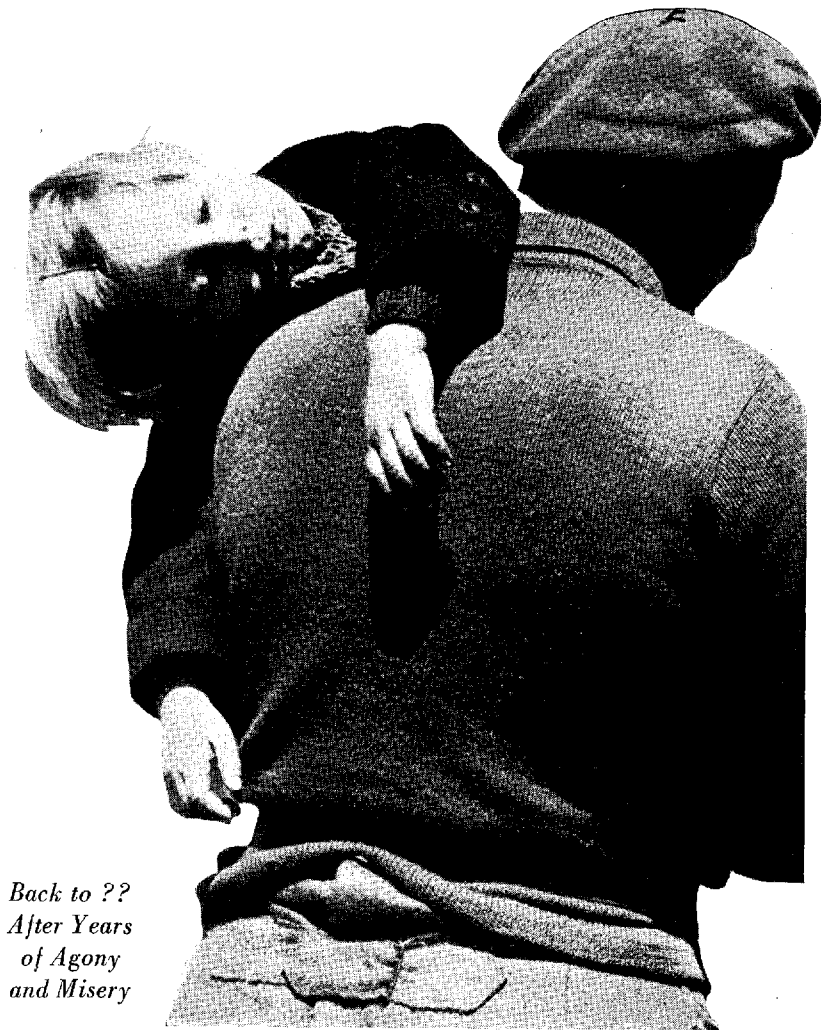

In spite of the problems of the past thirty years, with their two World Wars, economic depression, vast unemployment, and shifts of population, the structure of the Society has survived and it has steadily increased in scope and usefulness. In 1941 several innovations were made. To further alleviate the financial strain on borrowers, the term of repayment was extended from twenty weeks to forty weeks. A branch office was opened in Mattapan to make the services of the Society more accessible to the large Dorchester-Mattapan communities. Moreover, a new service without charge was offered to clients — Economic Adjustment Guidance. Borrowers have been encouraged to come and freely and confidentially discuss financial problems with the Managing Director and, by special appointment, with members of the Board of Directors, who represent nearly all branches of business, trades and various professions.

This service, though comparatively new, has already proved of invaluable assistance to the workingman who wishes aid in preparing a budget or to the factory owner or storekeeper who is faced with the problems of economizing or expanding. All have profited by the wisdom and experience of the forty-five Directors who are always eager to help members of the community who, through no fault of their own, are on the fringe of economic insecurity. As a result of this remedial service and budgetary advice, many of our own clients and some referred to the Society by other social agencies improved their standard of living and gained relative peace of mind.

Some of the original founders and Directors of this useful and constructive communal service are still with the Society; others have died, after giving many years of unselfish, unstinting and devoted service to the organization which they loved and to which they were affectionately attached. Tobias Berman, Selig Lipsky, Nathan Pinanski and Louis Pokroisky were instrumental in the organization of the Hebrew Free Loan Society of Boston and they were loyal to it to the very end. Of these, Nathan Pinanski served as president, Selig Lipsky as treasurer, and Louis Pokroisky as secretary for over a quarter of a century — from the inception of the organization to the time of their death.

These men were great spiritual architects who left lasting monuments to their cherished memory: Synagogues, Hebrew schools, Moeth Chittim organizations, Talmud-study societies and other charitable, educational and religious institutions. Although they were busy with many benevolent associations, the Hebrew Free Loan Society of Boston always won the preference of their affections; and with their passing on, Boston Jewry sustained an irreparable loss and the Society was left with a vacuum that was hard to be filled.

Many young men — in a number of cases their sons — representing a second generation in Hebrew Free Loan Service, have taken their place and brought renewed vitality and vigor into every channel of the Society's work. Both young and old, working side by side, they are ever trying to broaden and extend the scope of the service rendered by the Society. The Society is now preparing for the postwar period, building up its capital and setting up the necessary agencies so that it may be able to give the returning servicemen, among other worthy applicants, the same friendly, sympathetic, courteous aid, but on a much larger scale, which it has rendered in the past.

Six Decades Of Migration, Rescue and Rehabilitation

by

JOSEPH C. HYMAN
Executive Vice Chairman
Joint Distribution Committee

SIXTY years is but an episode in the life of a people. Seldom, however, has a comparable period of time been so crowded with events tragic and fateful to the Jewish people as the span of time compressed between the 80's of the last and the 40's of the current century. This relatively short period — short when measured against the thousands of years of Jewish history — has witnessed the outbreak of mass pogroms in the 80's; the persistent deterioration in the status of the Jews in the great centers of Eastern Europe at the turn of the century; the outbreak of World War I with its devastating effects on the Jewish population in war-torn Europe; and the postwar chaos followed by the slow and painful process of precarious political stabilization and economic reconstruction during the twenties. These years have also seen the gradual disintegration of the political order in Europe, culminating in the rise of Nazism and the outbreak of World War II with all its tragic consequences to mankind, in general, and unparalleled disastrous effects upon the fate of European Jewry.

The outbreak of pogroms in the 80's provided the immediate dramatic impetus to the mass migration of Russian Jewry. This migration of 3,000,000 over 4,000 miles of land and sea was indeed a process of staggering proportions. Brave attempts were made to channelize this huge stream of humanity on the move. There were committees in Russia, Austria, Germany, to help the migrants en route to the land of their choice. These committees, however, were only called upon to deal with exceptional cases of helplessness. By far, the majority of them completed their journey without outside assistance, except from their relatives who had preceded them. By and large, this vast undertaking remained a family affair where mutual help was self-evident and a deeply ingrained habit.

A number of organizations sprang up to meet the various problems created by the influx of thousands of immigrants. Among these are the Hebrew Immigrant Sheltering Aid Society (HIAS); the Baron de Hirsch Fund; the Industrial Removal Office; and the National Council of Jewish Women. There were other organizations which carried on highly beneficial work. By and large, however, they dealt with exceptional cases only.

World War I and Aftermath

The exodus of more than three million Jews left, no doubt, considerable elbow room for those less adventuresome brethren who stayed behind. Moreover, before long the emigrant became a source of help to those he had left behind in the Old World. Remittances to aged parents, to needy relatives, to communal institutions, were a common and widespread practice even in pre-World War days.

Then, in the fateful summer of 1914, the lightning struck. During the ensuing four years, ruin and havoc spread far and wide; not a single Jewish community in Eastern Europe escaped the ravages of the war. Many Jewish communities were completely obliterated. And when the war was over and the peasants, East and West, went back to their plowing, many Jewish artisans and shopkeepers had little to come back to.

As soon as communication with Europe was restored, an ever-swelling stream of relief began to flow from American Jews to their impoverished relatives who had escaped the holocaust. Efforts to help the Jews to emigrate and find new homes elsewhere were numerous. The most notable of these was the increased emigration to Palestine which, following the Balfour Declaration in 1917, became the lodestone of all inspired by the ideal of Zionism.

In the center of these various and varied activities stood the Joint Distribution Committee. It had come into being in 1914, soon after the beginning of the war, and represented a notable achievement in coordinating Jewish rescue and relief activities. Since it was really a merger of three relief organizations, representing the three major Jewish groups — orthodox, general, and labor — it strove, from its inception, to formulate a policy and pursue a course of action that would make it the instrument, the emissary of rescue and rehabilitation, of all American Jewry. Its hope in this respect was in a large measure realized. Thus, when in 1917 the J.D.C. appealed to the Jews of America for $10,000,000 the response was most encouraging; New York City alone attained its quota of $5,000,000 in ten days.

Operations of the J.D.C. began early in 1915. Palestine Jews were the first ones to be saved from starvation and the threat of an epidemic. With the help of the State Department and through the friendly offices of neutral governments, J.D.C. helped the stricken Jewish communities in war-torn Europe through the Juedische Hilfskomitee in Berlin, the Israelitische Allianz zu Wien, the Ekopo in Petrograd, and a number of local aid committees. These operations were considerably hampered after the United States entered the war against Germany. Only the end of the war permitted the J.D.C. to start functioning to the maximum of its capacity.

The aftermath of the war brought with it, aside from starvation and disease, a great deal of political and economic confusion as well . . . anti-Jewish disorders occurred daily. During the civil war period following the end of World War I, 200,000 Jews were the victims of pogroms in the Ukraine alone.

The J.D.C. promptly organized machinery of relief on behalf of the victims of war and of the ensuing pogroms. Units of trained workers — sanitation, child care, and economic experts — were sent successively to conduct the relief work. Working under the most difficult circumstances and at a considerable personal risk of life and limb, representatives of the J.D.C. promptly found their way to the areas of need; two distinguished members of the group, Professor Israel Friedlander and Rabbi Bernard Cantor, were murdered by marauding guerrillas. In close cooperation with non-Jewish agencies, such as the American Relief Administration, the YMCA and others, the J.D.C. succeeded in getting emergency relief to hundreds of thousands of Jewish sufferers in famine-stricken Russia.

While space does not permit a detailed description of J.D.C. operations in the field of rescue and rehabilitation, the scope of its work may well be indicated by a brief description of some of the major activities which bear full testimony to its pliancy and resourcefulness in coping with Jewish needs in the period between two world wars.

The health of the war victims was badly impaired; the paramount task was the restoration of the health of the Jewish population. A medical commission dispatched to Poland in 1921 tackled the job of sanitary rehabilitation. In line with the traditional policy of stimulating local responsibility and self-help, the J.D.C. promoted the organization of the Society for Safeguarding the Health of the Jews in Poland (TOZ), which subsequently assumed the major part of the J.D.C. health program. In adjoining countries the J.D.C. subsidized and cooperated with a smaller organization known as the OSE. In Palestine the Malaria Research Unit, maintained by the J.D.C. in cooperation with the Mandatory Government, did a pioneer job in eradicating this dreaded disease.

Orphans and abandoned children created another grave problem. Eastern Europe, outside of Russia, had about 60,000 of them in 1918. In Poland "Centos" — one of many J.D.C. "instrumentalities" — did a splendid job in caring for these unfortunate children. In Palestine, the Orphans' Committee cared for over 4,000 children with funds largely supplied by J.D.C.

Repatriation and emigration also constituted a huge task. From 1921 to 1923 the J.D.C. helped no less than 300,000 Jewish "migrants" either return to their homes or find new ones.

Nor were the cultural and spiritual needs of the war victims ignored. The J.D.C. records with pride that it created, restored, and supported in Europe no less than 1,800 educational institutions having a total register of 225,000 students.

Reconstruction and rehabilitation, however, was the biggest, costliest and most exacting job. In Russia, the Agro-Joint was called upon to transform hundreds of thousands of impoverished and disfranchised Jewish ex-traders into self-reliant cooperative farmers and factory workers. The land settlement alone affected the lives of a quarter of a million, and the land area of these cooperative colonies in the Ukraine and the Crimea was fully three million acres. In Poland, vast amounts of money were spent to rebuild shattered homes and business places, to establish vocational training centers, and to organize a credit system particularly suited to the needs of Polish Jewry.

A Loaf of Bread Stands Between Them and Starvation

The J.D.C., jointly with the J.C.A. (Jewish Colonization Association) through the American Joint Reconstruction Foundation which they established, utilized the sporadic efforts of local cooperative agencies to build a comprehensive system of cooperative credit societies or kassas which enabled tens of thousands of Jewish craftsmen, traders, and businessmen, to regain their economic footing.

In 1933 these cooperative societies had a membership of 191,000. More than five million individual loans, totalling $580,000,000, were granted by these societies according to the record on the eve of World War II. In addition, the J.D.C. subsidized many free loan kassas which served those who could not afford to pay the customary interest rate. Cooperative societies were also established in Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Finland, Greece, Latvia, Lithuania, Rumania, and Turkey.

For Palestine, the J.D.C. joined hands and funds with the Palestine Cooperative Company to form the Palestine Economic Corporation, one of the most important economic bodies dedicated to the laying of a sound economic foundation for the upbuilding of the new Yishuv (settlement). To this body the J.D.C. transferred cash and assets of about $1,800,000.

The wide efforts of rehabilitation and reconstruction of Jewish life after World War I absorbed vast amounts of funds. The J.D.C. alone spent almost $100,000,000 during the inter-war period. Vast funds mobilized by the Zionist movement poured into the upbuilding of Palestine. The financial support that flowed from relatives and friends in this and other countries to the stricken Jewish communities in Europe is commonly held to have been at least as great as that provided by organized Jewish effort. It was, in all, a huge mending, life-restoring job, which the future historians will, no doubt, view as a noble expression of a people's deeply ingrained sense of duty and responsibility.

This recuperative process was interrupted by the rise of the Nazi regime in Germany. Adolf Hitler was not long in announcing to the world that his primary task was to destroy the Jews. Jewish organizations promptly braced themselves to meet the new situation. The J.D.C. embarked on a large program of aid on behalf of the victims of Hitler's racialism. Help came in various and ingenious ways. Relief was extended to suffering Jews on the spot. Between 1933 and the outbreak of the war, over 100,000 Jews were assisted in emigrating to the United States, Palestine and other countries. Upon arrival countless thousands were assisted in adjusting themselves to the new environment.

In the United States, the National Refugee Service shouldered the task of aiding the refugees; in Latin American countries various local committees, subsidized by the J.D.C., assumed the task of introducing the newcomer into the social and economic life of their respective countries; in Palestine the various Palestinian agencies performed the same task. In all these efforts, Jewish organizations received the friendly cooperation of the government of the United States and other public and private agencies. At the same time the J.D.C. did not neglect the vital work carried on in Eastern Europe on behalf of the discriminated-against Jews in Poland and Rumania.

The outbreak of World War II increased Jewish suffering manifold; the J.D.C. intensified its efforts correspondingly. Working under almost unbelievably difficult conditions, the J.D.C. brought help to virtually all corners of the world where Jews were stranded and suffered. In 1944 alone, J.D.C. appropriated over $20,000,000 — almost double the amount of 1943 — a sum without parallel for J.D.C. and perhaps unequalled by any other private relief organization. During this year the J.D.C. has continued to bring relief to Jews in areas occupied by the enemy; in areas liberated by the Allied armies, and to Jews in many neutral and Allied countries where friendly governments afforded Jewish refugees a temporary or permanent haven. It has supported thousands of Jewish refugees in Switzerland, Spain, Portugal, Sweden, Rumania, Latin America, and has provided relief to some 12,000 Jews stranded in Shanghai.

Up to the end of 1944, the J.D.C. assisted some 80,000 Jews in escaping from Axis-dominated countries. In 1944 alone over 10,000 of these refugees were assisted by the J.D.C. to reach safety in Palestine. In this work the J.D.C. enjoyed the wholehearted cooperation of the War Refugee Board, the International Red Cross, and other organizations. If more Jews did not survive to see the day of liberation, it was not due to any slackened effort on the part of the J.D.C. but to the stubborn fact that Jews faced the most determined enemy bent upon the complete elimination of Jewry from the face of the earth. Some four-and-a-half to five million Jews were done to death on the European continent by the Nazis.

The liberation of Europe revealed the full extent of the Jewish tragedy. All reports emphasize the urgent need for immediate aid in restoring the remnants of the Jewish communities to physical and economic health. The amounts requested by the representatives from the liberated Jewish communities are staggering. For the first three months of 1945 the J.D.C. appropriations reached a total in excess of $10,000,000, a sum never equalled in J.D.C. history, but still only a fraction of what was requested by overseas Jewish leaders.

Clearly, the size of the relief and rescue task at least in their first phases, is not a job for voluntary organizations but for governments and for international agencies with much vaster resources than ours. But, the immediate J.D.C. program will need $46,570,000 to do what may be called "an adequate job" this first year of liberation. In drafting its 1945 program, the J.D.C. also had in mind the basic fact that the surviving Jewish populations present special problems and special needs, i.e., the rebuilding of Jewish religious and communal life, that exceed the traditional scope of government agencies and must be met by Jewish effort. Furthermore, there are dangers of delay in relying on others to bring aid to points where it is most urgently needed. No relief agency moves as quickly to the catastrophic spot as does the J.D.C. and this is attested to by its thirty years' record.

They Are Homeless No More

THE half century that covers the span of the development of organized Jewish communal activity in Boston significantly coincides with the development of the Jewish National Home in Palestine. In 1895, when the elders of Boston Jewry initiated their philanthropic activities, few, if any, realized that at that very hour a drama was taking place in France which was to have far-ranging repercussions in Jewish life throughout the world.

When Captain Dreyfus was brought to trial on false charges, a young Viennese journalist named Theodore Herzl quickly perceived that not one man but the entire Jewish people was on trial. And that young Viennese Jew, reading the danger signals of the future with prophetic vision, thereupon dedicated his life to the rebuilding of the Jewish National Home. Throughout the many centuries of Jewish history the love of Zion has been deeply imbedded in Jewish consciousness. It was an integral part of the daily prayers. It was part of the longing of a people torn from its homeland, fearful of having to reach out for the wanderer's staff, feeling the shocks of every political and economic disturbance.

The Dreyfus case shocked Herzl into a great missionary zeal. In his mind and in his heart the inexpressible and intangible home-hungriness of a people was transformed into an organized movement with all of the apparatus of political and statesman-like action.

It is, indeed, symbolic that the birth of organized Jewish communal endeavor in Boston occurred almost simultaneously with the birth of the World Zionist Organization. Few cities in the United States have contributed in such rich measure to the advancement of the Zionist cause. It is no mere accident of geography that the late Justice Brandeis came upon the world Zionist scene out of the city of Boston. Nor is it mere chance that Justice Felix Frankfurter, who played a most significant role in the shaping of the destiny of Palestine, was also a member of the Jewish community in New England's first city. The contributions which these great leaders made to the upbuilding of the Jewish National Home are a reflection of the understanding and leadership of the Jewish community of Boston.

Palestine a Necessity

The early struggles, the frustrations, the hopes and the plans of the Zionist movement are all too well known. The Dreyfus case in France, the pogroms in Czarist Russia were the first indications that Palestine was to play an ever larger role in Jewish life, not merely as an ideal, but as an urgent necessity. Those who labored to rebuild Palestine, to preserve the Jewish spirit and the Jewish soul, were later to realize that it would be desperately needed to save Jewish life. The inexorable march of world events, the catastrophic effects of two world wars, the decimation of the Jewish people by the cruelest forms of oppression that mankind has ever known — these terrible realities focused the hopes of all Jews on the Jewish National Home.

Before the first World War there was a small residual Jewish settlement in Palestine depending for its existence upon the charity of Jews abroad. Many of the early attempts at agricultural settlement resulted in heart-breaking disappointment. The men and women who came out of the ghettos of Poland and Russia were equipped with little more than courage and idealism for the superhuman task of reclaiming a neglected land. Although they suffered many setbacks and many fell by the wayside, the early settlers carried on with undiminished pertinacity. The lavish philanthropy of one man, Edmond De Rothschild, made possible the establishment of the early centers of settlement, but despite the fact that he poured millions of dollars into Palestine, colonization made very limited progress during that period.

The Soil Is Part of the Pioneer's Life

Pride of Any Community — Tel Aviv's Meier Park

Heroic Pioneering

The experiences of those years of trial and error forcibly demonstrated the necessity for national planning, national financing, and national action. That is the true significance of the agencies which constitute the United Palestine Appeal.

The transformation of the Jewish homeland in Palestine has often been compared to the era of heroic pioneering in the United States. But the reclamation of Eretz Israel has been unique in that every foot of land, desirable or undesirable, which the Jews have brought under cultivation, has had to be bought and paid for by the Jewish people, frequently at a very high rate. The establishment of the Jewish National Fund at the turn of the century constituted one of the most revolutionary developments in the history of colonization. When this fund was set up to purchase land as the property of the entire Jewish people, a solid base was established for the success of the entire reconstruction program in Palestine. The creation of the Jewish National Fund had a far-reaching effect, for it paved the way for the emergence of the Jewish farmer or peasant class that would follow the plow and till the soil with its own hands.

Some twenty years later, when the Keren Hayesod, or Palestine Foundation Fund, was organized, the blueprint for the growth of a healthy and progressive agricultural community in Palestine was completed. These two great national funds, which American Jewry today supports through the United Palestine Appeal, became the twin pillars of the entire structure of the new Palestine. While the Jewish National Fund proceeded with its task of acquiring new land-areas for settlement and cultivation, the Palestine Foundation Fund was building new settlements, providing agricultural machinery, establishing schools, building roads, and training the newcomers for life on the soil.

Haven For Homeless

The years between the two world wars were marked by the greatest strides in the growth of the Jewish National Home. When the British Government issued the Balfour Declaration in 1917, there were no more than about 50,000 Jews in Palestine. By 1939 this figure had increased to 550,000. Today it is estimated that the Jewish community of Palestine consists of 625,000 men, women, and children. The advances which Palestine has made in agriculture and industry have been nothing short of phenomenal. Throughout the world the Jewish homeland is regarded as a historic model of achievement in modern colonization. Many countries have sent representatives to Palestine to visit and study its cooperative and communal settlements, which are the backbone of the new creative Jewish community.

In the first phase of its upbuilding, Palestine was regarded as an ideal, and those who labored to advance the Zionist cause did so with the zeal and devotion of men and women building a new homeland. In later years, however, when storms of hate and oppression lashed out against the Jewish people, Palestine the homeland was subordinated to Palestine the haven. The fact that more than 350,000 Jewish refugees have been settled in Palestine since the beginning of the Nazi regime is testimony to its unique role as a refuge and a haven.

New Life Begins

There were many thousands who came to Palestine to build a new home. There were many thousands of others who came to Palestine to find a refuge. Some came, but many more fled to the Jewish homeland. It was miraculous that Palestine could receive all these hounded and homeless Jews, but it was even more miraculous that those who looked to Palestine as a refuge came to love it as a homeland.

The lawyers, the doctors, the scientists, the artists — the men and women who knew the comforts of urban European life — found themselves confronted with the problem of beginning all over again, of taking up the arduous role of pioneers. This period of mass migration was a great test for the Jewish homeland for it was not only necessary to receive the large numbers of refugees, but to adjust and absorb them. Both Palestine and the refugees have passed that test gloriously, with the help of the United Palestine Appeal.

Palestine has saved countless Jewish lives. It has saved many hundreds of thousands who have come to its shores. It has saved many additional hundreds of thousands who were sustained by its promise and inspiration in the years of darkest Jewish tragedy. In the years when Hitler sought to pin a yellow badge on the entire Jewish people, when he sought to degrade the Jew and place him before the entire world as a miserable, wandering beggar — in the days when the mounting wave of oppression was not only breaking the body but the spirit of the Jewish people — in those very days Palestine was the one unflinching tower of strength and hope for Jews everywhere. For what more effective reply could Jews have made to the calumnies of their enemy and what better evidence could they have furnished of the indestructible spirit and noble courage and creativeness of the Jews than the daily epic of the rebirth and the rebuilding of the Jewish National Home.

The Jews of Palestine were confronted with many crises. There were internal problems, there were Arab disturbances, there were political problems, and the transitory disappointments. But in everything that they did, in everything that they dreamed, they were dedicated to one supreme objective: that the Jews must never be refugees again, that they must never be wanderers again, that they must never again be the pitiful, helpless pawns on the chessboard of economic and political disturbances.

Smile of Confidence and Security — Harvest Time in Palestine

Palestinians, too, Go Down to the Sea in Ships

Serving the Allies

When the world was plunged into catastrophic war, the Jews of Palestine immediately inaugurated a total war effort that was without parallel throughout the Middle East. What had been built through the toil and sacrifice of the Jewish pioneers was converted into a bulwark of Allied strength in the strategic Mediterranean sector. With the help of the United Palestine Appeal, the manpower and womanpower of Jewish Palestine were promptly mobilized for the defense of democracy. New industries were established to produce war products, to repair warships, to manufacture uniforms, pharmaceuticals, ammunition, and mines. More than 35,000 Jewish men and women enlisted in the British armed forces, and their heroic exploits at El Alamein, in Greece, in Italy, and Germany have added new lustre to the Jewish name. The Jewish Brigade was in the forefront of the fighting in the final chapter of the destruction of the German armies. Palestine has truly emerged as the most dynamic Jewish community in the world, the new center of leadership and spiritual revival for the shattered remnants that survive on the continent that is soaked with the blood of almost 5,000,000 Jewish martyrs.

Problem of the Future

Now as we face the tasks of peace and rehabilitation, Palestine once again looms as a most challenging force in the reconstruction of Jewish life. When we speak of the restoration of the surviving Jews of Europe, we must do so with a realistic understanding that in many lands not only the structure of Jewish life, but its foundations have been seriously damaged. We are not only confronted with the problems of racial prejudice, but with its economic manifestations, and these greatly intensify the gravity of the postwar situation. In the post-Hitler period, we will not face emergencies involving a threat of violent death to Jews in various parts of Europe. Nevertheless, the era of crisis will not be at an end, for our work of rehabilitation will have to be carried on in an atmosphere charged with the explosive elements of prejudices fostered over a period of many years.

This is one of the fundamental reasons why the Jewish homeland in Palestine must occupy a preeminent place in the pattern of postwar restoration. Those who cannot return or do not wish to return to live on the rim of a smoldering volcano will have to be given a new home. In times of war the need for havens was uppermost in our minds. In times of peace, we cannot any longer think in terms of havens which are of a transitory character. We must think of a home — we must think in terms of permanence. If the many thousands who cannot be restored to normal life in Europe are to have an opportunity to begin life anew, to share in the benefits of a world of peace and freedom, the Jewish homeland in Palestine must be open to them.

The opportunities for maximum immigration must be fully developed through the acquisition of new land, the establishments of new agricultural settlements, and the expansion of industry. Through the United Palestine Appeal American Jews will be asked to give Palestine the financial support which it needs to speed the transition from war to peace, in order to enable it to receive the large numbers of Jews who look to the Jewish homeland for redemption and new life.

We have suffered many setbacks in the last half century. We have had more than our measure of tragedy and death. The Jewish people must never again live in darkness and fear. We can reform our decimated ranks, we can restore the dignity and faith of our people if we devote ourselves to the great and historic purpose of rebuilding the Jewish National Home.

New Life For The Newcomers To Our Shores

by JOSEPH E. BECK

Executive Director, National Refugee Service

APPROXIMATELY 300,000 refugees have come to the United States within the past ten years. This figure represents newcomers to the United States who were born in Axis-dominated European countries, most of whom were refugees from religious, racial, or political persecution. In keeping with its tradition of asylum to the oppressed, America has been a foremost haven for Hitler's victims.

Never before in the history of American immigration has the reception, settlement, and adjustment of immigrants been so thoroughly organized and effectively carried out on a national scale. From the time the first trickle of refugees began to arrive, organizations with a traditional interest in immigrant welfare began extending varied assistance to the newcomers. American Jews, individually and through their organizations, naturally played an important part in helping the new arrivals. Jewish social service agencies in New York and other seaport cities added special departments to help the newcomers. Various emergency organizations, frequently non-sectarian, were founded to help rescue and assist physicians, scholars, refugee children, and other special groups. Thousands of individuals, relatives, friends and sympathizers of the victims, were drawn into the rescue effort. Prospective immigrants were required to furnish affidavits signed by Americans, guaranteeing that the refugees would not become public charges. The complexities of fulfilling the regulations governing immigration became the concern of thousands of Americans.

In October, 1934, the National Coordinating Committee for Aid to Refugees and Immigrants coming from Germany was formed in order to coordinate the efforts of the many individuals and organizations aiding refugees. The work of the Committee benefited refugees of all faiths. The Committee stimulated the establishment of local committees in communities throughout the country which participated in the program of refugee adjustment and coordinated their activities. One of the earliest and most outstanding was the Boston Committee for Refugees under the chairmanship of Walter H. Bieringer. As a confeder-tion of agencies, however, the National Coordinating Committee was not able to accomplish certain desirable ends in meeting refugee needs. There was an increasing demand, which became urgent in 1938 when refugee immigration took an upward trend, for consolidation of refugee assistance work under a stronger central organization.

As a result of a study of the National Coordinating Committee, the National Refugee Service was established in June, 1939, as a single agency incorporating many, though not all, of the organizations of the National Coordinating Committee. The major responsibility for meeting the refugee situation in the United States has since fallen to the National Refugee Service. The NRS was included as a third agency participating financially in the United Jewish Appeal.

Since its inception, the National Refugee Service has carried out a varied program on behalf of the refugees, under continually changing conditions. It affords national coordination and direction in dealing with refugee problems. It acts as liaison between the communities and the refugees themselves on the one hand, and the government on the other. Perhaps its most conspicuous activities have been as a service organization engaging in job and professional placement, vocational retraining, social and economic adjustment, provision of temporary relief to needy refugees during the early phases of their adjustment, and assistance to friends, relatives, and affiants in aiding immigration of refugees.

The National Refugee Service developed the first complete program of its kind in American history to absorb immigrants quickly and effectively. The success of this program is demonstrated by the fact that refugees are aiding conspicuously in the American war effort, both in the armed forces, where thousands are enlisted, and on the civilian production lines.

To facilitate the refugees' economic adjustment in terms of their particular skill and past training, and without displacing American workers, the agency engages in a well-knit and broadly planned program of services, including employment, vocational retraining, business loans for non-competitive, self-supporting enterprises. A parallel program of social and cultural adjustment is designed to teach them our language and folkways, and direct them to our social and cultural institutions.

Through its resettlement program, the agency aims to transfer the refugee from the port of entry to more suitable areas. This is based on two principal ideas: first, to prevent "refugee colonies" — the concentration of newcomers in principal cities — as undesirable for newcomers and the country alike; second, to effect the distribution of the newcomers in accordance with their skills and capacities, and the local possibilities of economic absorption. Experience indicates that the economic and psychological adjustment of the refugees can be accomplished much more rapidly through the neighborliness, the friendship, and the personal touch of a small community than through the institutional methods applied in a busy metropolis. Resettlement speeds the time it takes a refugee to become a full-fledged member of the American community.

Coupled with this effort, particular attention is devoted to the problems of specialized groups. Special NRS committees made up of people of experience in their own fields coordinated their efforts to deal with the problems of the various groups of scholars, scientists, artists, writers, teachers, whose professional skills could be utilized in America. Outstanding American medical men lend their willing efforts to aid in establishing practices for refugee physicians in towns and rural areas where doctors are urgently needed.

Retraining serves as yet another example of the planned program carried out by the National Refugee

Service to help the newcomer take care of himself. Many refugees who cannot hope to earn their livelihoods in former occupations have been retrained for other fields. Many refugee dentists have learned to become dental mechanics, architects to do draftsmen's work, business men to become accountants. Those with mechanical aptitudes but no training have become auto repair workers, power machine operators, welders. Others have learned farming, baking, upholstery.

The structure of refugee aid services, with the NRS as a hub, radiates into all parts of the country constituting what is undoubtedly the greatest organized American effort dealing with immigrant newcomers. With 900 cooperating committees and professional organizations, the National Refugee Service represents an accumulated body of experience and techniques for coping with the problems of refugee immigration, not easily replaced or improvised.

The Boston Committee for Refugees

ANY history of Boston's philanthropic endeavors during the past half century would be incomplete without mention of the Boston Committee for Refugees, an agency which performed noble service for victims of German persecution. This agency is not as active as it was before World War II, but the spirit which inspired the community to greater service for the downtrodden still persists.

Boston's first experience with refugees from Germany began in 1934. In those days of migration, Boston received a small number of refugees assigned to this city by the National Coordinating Committee of New York.

Refugees, at first, were helped by a group of about fifty Bostonians who were banded together through the initiative of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies. This group became a most effective "organization" under direction of Walter H. Bieringer, an energetic and sympathetic Boston businessman.

With Mr. Bieringer's guidance, businessmen, physicians, dentists, scientists, and scholars set out to help the refugees in their respective fields. These men rendered friendly, personalized service to the newcomers — today citizens of a free America — who needed friendship, sympathetic understanding, and economic assistance. Their work was supplemented effectively by the Jewish Family Welfare Association, which granted material relief. But jobs were the major needs of these newcomers. They had to have employment. They needed a chance to start on the road of self dependence.

And it was in this connection that the group under Mr. Bieringer performed yeoman service. They toiled endlessly, hunting for jobs. They called on friends to give work to these newcomers. They did, in short, everything that was humanly possible to find jobs at a time when jobs were scarce.

These twentieth century "Minute Men" did an effective job for three years. However, when immigration reached flood-tide, the men could no longer do a thorough, individualized job. This was a situation which prevailed all over the country. The result was the creation of the Boston Committee for Refugees.

After the BCR was organized — an accomplishment made possible by the all-out cooperation of the Council of Jewish Women, sisterhoods, synagogues, temple brotherhoods, fraternal orders, etc. — a special reception center was established at a large residence rented for that purpose in Roxbury. Here refugee families lived together until the head of the respective family unit could find a job and the newcomer could start "on his own," living where he desired. Individuals not residing in this house received financial aid, from the Jewish Family Welfare Association, to meet their needs until they, too, became self-supporting.

Boston Went All-Out For Refugee Children

The Committee operated on a three-fold program. It strived for the total rehabilitation of the refugee through economic adjustment, family social service, and social readjustment. As a result, nearly all the agencies of the AJP came into play. These were supplemented by special educational programs organized to orient the newcomers to Americanism and to help them on the road to citizenship. Special retraining programs, such as a sewing project, were instituted, and a coordinated program of vocational guidance and job placement was put into operation.

A most important service rendered to the refugees related to the foster home campaign instituted by the JFCWA, in cooperation with the Council of Jewish Women, NRS, and the German-Jewish Children's Aid, Inc. This program placed numerous children in substitute homes where they received affectionate care and assistance.

A survey is under way to show accurately the manifold ways in which these refugees have contributed to the making of a better America. There is no doubt in the minds of those who have worked for and with these people that the record will reflect credit upon our new American citizens as well as upon the American Jewish people who made such a record possible.

The National Jewish Welfare Board In Peace And War

by LOUIS KRAFT, Executive Director

Chaplains Selected by JWB Serve Our Servicemen Everywhere

RECENTLY there was published in newspapers throughout the United States a photograph of a Jewish chaplain holding services with some of his fighting men in a castle in Germany formerly occupied by Goebbels. When Purim came soon after, the same chaplain held his services in the same place.

In Fairbanks, Alaska, there is a rugged pioneer woman who, when the war came, turned her house into a club for the Jewish soldiers. One of the few Jews in the town, she and her husband ran everything from a "rye bread breakfast" to a wedding.

In the town of Natal, Brazil, there are two Jewish groups, one Sephardic, the other Russian, who for many years had nothing to do with each other. During the war, a Jewish chaplain and a USO-JWB worker stationed there needed the cooperation of the local community to serve the Jewish men in the armed forces properly. The result was not only the cooperation of the two communities of Jews in serving Jewish servicemen, but a permanent bond was developed which led to the founding of a joint Hebrew School.

Out west in an army camp, a JWB worker in the USO-JWB headquarters noticed one soldier standing aside from the dancing and entertainment. He inquired about him and heard that he was a bit of a problem. His clothes were sloppy, his bunk was never ready for inspection; in general both his morale and his conduct were low. The JWB worker noticed the soldier watching the drummer in the band with interest.

"Say, soldier, ever play in a band?"

"Yeah," the soldier grunted suspiciously.

"How would you like to take the drummer's place for a while?"

"I'd like it."

He took the drummer's place for part of the evening, came back again to do the same and became a much better soldier.

These stories illustrate some of the results of the untiring work of the National Jewish Welfare Board, constituent member of the USO, and the organization recognized by the War Department as the authorized agency responsible for the religious and recreational welfare of Jewish men and women in the armed forces of the United States.

The multiple wartime activities of the National Jewish Welfare Board, the ability to coordinate soldier and civilian activities, the insight into individual problems, the understanding of family relationships, and the appreciation of the necessity of developing meaningful religious and hospitality activities have been made possible of realization only because the National Jewish Welfare Board has, over many years, acquired the experience and the personnel necessary to the successful completion of its manifold tasks.

The Board came into existence during the first World War to provide religious, welfare, and recreational activities for men serving in the nation's armed forces. At that time the Board operated a total of 127 recreation "huts" here and abroad and employed a national field staff of 600 workers. At the close of the war the work was continued in peacetime and expanded to include service to veterans, both in hospitals and in relation to benefits they received through the Veterans Administration.

On July 1, 1921, the Jewish Welfare Board and the Council of Young Men's Hebrew and Kindred Associations were merged, and the Jewish Welfare Board became the national organization for YMHA's, YWHA's and Jewish Community Centers throughout the United States and Canada.

In the development of the Jewish center work, the Board assists in the activities of 290 Centers, with an approximate membership of 425,000. The Board's activities in this connection include statistical research projects; surveys of cultural resources of Jewish communities; analysis and interpretation of Jewish Community center facilities, activities and administration; field service; Jewish Center Lecture and Concert Bureau; Jewish extension education; leadership training; plans for new buildings; recommendations for community organization; summer and home camps; vocational guidance; cultural activities for refugees; and various community services.

The Board's part in the USO program is carried out by its Army and Navy Service Division, operating through a field staff of 315 workers, whose primary job is to help organize the existing facilities of the local communities on behalf of the USO program and to operate USO clubs assigned to the Board.

Affiliated with the Board's Army and Navy USO program are over 600 local committees formed to promote the recreational activities of the USO. The Board is also representative of thirty-seven national Jewish organizations including the leading rabbinical and synagogue groups of the United States.

The National Jewish Welfare Board program stresses cooperation with federal and community agencies already established in the civilian defense and war efforts field.

Many of the Jewish Centers have served as headquarters for scrap collections, Red Cross volunteer services, War Bond drives, civilian defense, and USO volunteer service.

Serving the Family

Here is a family in a Jewish community. The family consists of the mother and father, one daughter aged sixteen, one son aged twelve, a second daughter aged eight, and a son of four. Both parents are employed and are desirous of giving their children the proper education and training. For their basic non-sectarian education the children go to a public school. But that is only one part of the many influences that will shape their lives. Let us suppose the family takes full advantage of the facilities offered by their local Jewish center.

Father and mother like to know what is going on in the world both in general affairs and in the specific field of Jewish activities. They attend lectures and discussion groups at the center. Mother belongs to a child guidance clinic in operation at the center, in addition to her Red Cross and CDVO activities also located there. Father goes there to give blood, for exercise once in a while, and his lodge meeting in the center. The teen-age daughter takes part in the teen-age canteen, attends the dramatic group, and assists in the supervision of a Girl Scout troop. The twelve year old son meets with his club in the center and, in addition, works on the center newspaper. The four year old is too young for school and, while his parents are away at work, is taken care of in the nursery school of the center.

Where does the National Jewish Welfare Board come into this picture? In the first instance, the executive director of the center has been selected and placed by the personnel division of the Board, and his guiding hand has been trained in a philosophy of service and carefully planned up-to-date methods. The lectures that father and mother like to attend have been arranged by the JWB Concert and Lecture Bureau; daughter's teen-age canteen has been stimulated by the youth program of the JWB; the twelve year old is part of a club program enriched by the Program Department of the JWB.

If the children go to camp during the summer, they may go to one supervised by the JWB at a cost designed to fit low incomes. If the older brother has problems with respect to recreational, social, vocational, and educational adjustment, he can go to the center which is ready to assist along lines suggested by the Guidance Department of the JWB.

In all, mother and father and children are benefited by the service of the National Jewish Welfare Board, and helped to become happy and well-adjusted citizens in a democratic community.

Army and Navy Services

Mother has a brother who went into the army. When he went to training camp, he attended services conducted by a chaplain who was certified to the Army by the Committee of Army and Navy Religious Activities of the JWB. Religious articles for the services were supplied by the JWB. He carried with him a JWB prayer book, bible, and calendar.

In his free time this soldier will go to a USO Club operated by the JWB. He will find recreational and social activities there. There will be refreshments, companionship, parties, a place to read, and someone to listen to him and help solve his troubles.

When he goes overseas the JWB will continue to help him in religious and hospitality activities. There are JWB centers and workers all over the world. There will be heads of JWB departments travelling around the world to see if his wants are being cared for and to find out if there is anything else he needs.

If he is decorated for bravery or if he is a casualty, the Bureau of War Records of the JWB will keep track of his record, and his contribution to the war effort will be publicized.

When he returns and needs help figuring out his

rights and privileges as a veteran, the Veterans Service Department will give him all the assistance he needs. If he is in a hospital, both the JWB workers and the Serve-a-Hospital and Serve-a-Camp Committees of the Women's Division will be ready to help him.

The services of the National Jewish Welfare Board are at the call of servicemen according to the principle set down by the Board's first resolution of its Army and Navy Service Department. "It is resolved as a guiding principle to extend the service of the organization to soldiers and sailors without sectarian restriction, but at the same time to make adequate provision for the needs of soldiers and sailors of Jewish faith."

The work of the National Jewish Welfare Board should not be viewed as taking place in two separate categories, the Jewish Center Division and the Army and Navy Division. These two major departments have been set up for efficiency of organization but in actuality are one service, dedicated to the enrichment of Jewish life in America. They work in conjunction with each other and there are many common projects that employ the energies of both. The establishment of the Army and Navy Division was a recognition of the fact that the Jewish community of America had gone to war and where the interests of the Jewish community lies, there must go the energy and efforts of the National Jewish Welfare Board.

With the coming of the peace, the National Jewish Welfare Board is prepared to continue its service to the men and women of the armed forces. It is prepared to help them in their difficult readjustment to civilian life, and it is ready, willing, and able to make that postwar life a fuller, richer one for soldier and civilian alike.

Local Agencies

BENOTH ISRAEL SHELTERING HOME

BENOTH Israel Sheltering Home was chartered in 1891, for the purpose of "giving temporary shelter to deserving Israelites, aiding them in obtaining employment, and instructing them in the customs and usages of this country, thereby enabling them to become worthy citizens."

In 1896, the Society purchased a three-story brick building at 15 Cooper Street in the North End to meet the needs of the transient. Faithful to the purpose of the Society as stated in the charter, the Directors attended to every phase of the immigrant's life — physical, financial, cultural, and social. The immigrant was fed and sheltered; his relatives and "landsleit" were communicated with; he was prepared for naturalization; he was helped in getting a job; he was provided with a cash loan, if he desired to become a peddler; he was assisted financially in bringing his family over and in establishing a home when his family arrived.

Because of the exodus of Jews from the North End, the building on Cooper Street was sold in 1915. In March, 1916, the Otis Estate on Cambridge Street in the West End was purchased, which was later sold to the Society for Perpetuating New England Activities. In January, 1921, the plot of land on the corner of Cambridge and North Russell Streets was purchased and subsequently a building was erected thereon, which is the present No. 6 North Russell Street. In May, 1923, the Society voted to become affiliated with the Federated Jewish Charities.

THE JEWISH BIG BROTHER ASSOCIATION

WHEN anti-social acts of Jewish boys began to rise shortly after World War I, the community became interested in a preventive program, and in 1920 a Jewish Big Brother Association was organized. This Association was established under the direction of a committee that included Jacob J. Kaplan, chairman; Louis Hurwich, Mrs. N. A. Pelonsky, Judge Philip Rubenstein, Rabbi H. H. Rubenovitz, Coleman Silbert, and Samuel Silverman. The Hon. Lewis Goldberg was its first president and Judge A. E. Pinanski its first vice-president.

The Jewish Big Brother Association functions in cooperation with the Jewish Family Welfare Society's staff of skilled social service workers, juvenile court probation officers, and with other agencies, Jewish and non-Jewish, interested in curbing delinquency and in developing good citizens. The program of the Jewish Big Brother Association, which has been directed since its founding by Philip Slepian, has played an important part in keeping down the number of Jewish boys in state reform schools. As of October, 1944, for example, out of 509 boys at Shirley and Lyman schools, only one boy was Jewish.

The Association is made up of a large group of carefully selected persons of the community, each of whom has attained prominence in his profession or business and who has the ideal qualifications for serving a "little brother." These volunteers, working under the direction of the executive secretary, help guide the particular boy placed in their care to a better and fuller life.

The Big Brother Association's duties fall largely into these groupings: adjustment of differences and misunderstandings between parents and boys; guidance for social, moral, and cultural development on a higher and more desirable level; aid towards integration of personality; the overcoming of character obstacles and socially destructive habits; and better health, education, vocational guidance.

All activities of the Big Brother are based upon an enlightened sympathy, understanding, and continuing friendship with the boy.

Scores of former "little brothers" have been aided on the road to professional and business success. Scores of others have distinguished themselves as members of the armed forces.

The program of the Jewish Big Brother Association, which recently observed its twenty-fifth anniversary, has been acclaimed by judges, probation workers, educators, religious leaders, and specialists in the fields of crime prevention. The Association receives its funds from the Associated Jewish Philanthropies.

RABBINICAL PENSION FUND

THE Rabbinical Pension Fund originally was part of the Division of Family Aid of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies. The purpose of the Fund was to give aid to the orthodox Rabbis who were without position and were therefore in need of assistance.

When the Rabbinical Association was organized some ten years ago, Dr. Selekman suggested that it take over the administration of this Fund, because he felt that this was the more dignified and more appropriate way of handling this situation.

Since then, additional grants of money have been given to this Fund by the Associated Philanthropies as well as out of the treasury of the Associated Synagogues and certain other agencies.

It is indeed gratifying to be able to report that no member of the Rabbinate is allowed to be in want and whenever the need for relief does arise, it is administered with due regard to the sensibilities and to the position of the Rabbi involved.

UNITED MOATH CHITIM ASSOCIATION

THE Boston United Moath Chitim Association was organized in the North End about sixty-five years ago to provide needy families of the community with the essentials for Passover observance.

Membership of the Association includes twenty-one synagogues and the Jewish Family Welfare Association. The Association's program is financed by funds raised through donations by individuals, synagogues, and organizations. The Associated Jewish Philanthropies also grants the United Moath Chitim Association an additional sum.

Applications for Moath Chitim are, as a rule, made during the weeks preceding the Passover holiday at the various synagogues. Applications are investigated, to avoid duplication, and approved by each synagogue's committee. Moath Chitim is distributed in the form of money and matzohs at the synagogues. The Jewish Family Welfare Association mails checks to those whom the agency generally helps.

During the depression years, it has been estimated that one out of every ten Jewish families received Moath Chitim. However, during 1945, because of the favorable employment situation, requests were low, but the Association increased the allowances because of the increased costs of food.

THE JEWISH COMMUNITY COUNCIL OF METROPOLITAN BOSTON

THE Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Boston, organized in the summer of 1944, brings together for one concerted program twenty-one basic Jewish groups interested in improving human relations.

These basic Jewish groups are: American Jewish Committee, American Jewish Congress, Associated Jewish Philanthropies, Associated Synagogues, B'nai B'rith, B'rith Abraham, Combined Appeal, Jewish Labor Committee, Jewish National Workers Alliance, Jewish War Veterans, Mizrahi, Pioneers of Palestine, Poale Zion, Rabbinical Association, Workmen's Circle, Vaad Harabonim, Vaad Hoir, Zionist Groups, Young Israel, League of Jewish Women, and Council of Jewish Women.

In turn, these well-established, deeply-rooted Jewish organizations are made up of more than three hundred lodges, chapters, sisterhoods, brotherhoods, clubs, veterans' posts, fraternities, auxiliaries, trade union groups and other units.

Together all of these organizations are now trying to root out the seeds of hatred sown by Hitler in the soil of democracy. They have united so that the voice of Jewry can be raised most effectively for the dignity of the individual. They seek to educate for decent citizenship.

The Jewish Community Council has a central office which is constantly in touch with its constituent agencies and has available the resources of the Jewish civic protective groups in Metropolitan Boston, including the New England offices of the Anti-Defamation League and the American Jewish Congress. Operating in this fashion, the Community Council is not only able to cut down on much duplication of effort but also to mobilize manpower for the best possible results and to give voice to the Jewish community's will and strength through a single, broad-based, united agency.

In addition, the Community Council serves as a clearing house for the scheduling of all Jewish meetings in the community. It also is a clearing house for the scheduling of fund-raising campaigns. Finally, it has assembled considerable data on nonsectarian and Jewish groups that seek financial support and makes this information available to the prospective donor.

COMMITTEE FOR THE SUPPORT OF JEWISH TRADITIONAL INSTITUTIONS

SUPPORT of traditional, religious, charitable, and educational institutions of the old Yishuv (settlement) in Palestine has been an accepted practice among orthodox groups in this community. These institutions solicited through collections by their representatives (Meshulachim), by conducting religious holiday mail appeals and by distributing charity boxes.

Most of the contributors were not fully informed about these institutions situated thousands of miles away. They had no way of knowing whether the institutions to which they contributed were actually functioning, deserved their support, or received the money collected. In many instances after the collectors deducted their charges, a relatively small percentage of the money actually collected remained for distribution to the Palestinian agencies.

With the development and organization of central planning and financing by Jewish federations and Jewish welfare funds, the old methods of supporting traditional institutions were questioned. In this community an attempt at systematic control of traditional organizations appealing for support in this area was begun by the Associated Synagogues by certifying the appeals of these organizations. Finally, because of the need for a community-wide program, the Committee for the Support of Jewish Traditional Institutions was organized in 1944, composed of representatives from the Combined Jewish Appeal, the Associated Synagogues, and the Vaad Hoir. Its funds come from the Combined Jewish Appeal.

This Committee obtains all possible information about the programs of these institutions. It studies their financial receipts and expenditures to determine the amount of support the agencies are to receive from the Boston community. By making payments directly to the institutions in Palestine, the high cost of collections is saved, making it possible for the institutions to receive the full benefit of the contributions. Because of this program, it is unnecessary for these traditional agencies to send their collectors into Greater Boston.

To date, over sixty traditional institutions, both in Palestine and in this country, receive allocations from the Committee. In centralizing this program and in introducing objective methods in evaluating the financial needs of these institutions and the extent of Jewish community support, it is important that such community-wide support and control will not retard the growth and development of recognized and worth-while traditional institutions. These institutions must be assured that, despite the absence of the traditional solicitors, community support will grow stronger with time.

AMERICAN FUND FOR PALESTINIAN INSTITUTIONS

THE American Fund for Palestinian Institutions was organized in 1941 to coordinate in America the many fund-raising appeals being made by various modern Palestinian secular and religious, educational, cultural and social welfare agencies.

In 1945 the American Fund is subsidizing the following: Mikveh Israel Agricultural School, Tel-Aviv; Palestine Symphony Orchestra; Hechalutz Farms-Cream Ridge & Hightstown, N. J.; Hebrew Teachers College, Jerusalem; Nautical School, Haifa; Julian W. Mack School and Workshops, Jerusalem; Palestine Hebrew Writers Association (Agudath Hasofrim); B'rit Ivrit Olamit — World Hebrew League; The Language Academy (Vaad Halashon), Jerusalem; Habimah Theatre, Tel-Aviv.

Also subsidized are: The Trade School for Yemenite Girls and two Nurseries, Rehoboth; Physical Training Program; Palestine Conservatoire of Music, Jerusalem; Bezalel Arts and Crafts School, Jerusalem; Tel-Aviv Museum; American

HEBREW UNIVERSITY

HIGH up on Mount Scopus, outside the walls of Jerusalem, where Roman legions camped when Titus destroyed the city, stands the Hebrew University — the only Jewish university in the world. The Hebrew University is the center of higher learning for world Jewry, the place where the Jewish spirit asserts itself creatively and from which the Jewish contributions to world culture radiate.

Starting modestly in 1925 with two institutes — chemistry and Jewish studies — and with a handful of scholars, the Hebrew University has become a truly great seat of learning in the short span of twenty years. When Hitler began his program of extermination of the Jews, Hebrew University was a haven of refuge to scores of Germany's outstanding scholars and scientists.

Before the outbreak of World War II it had a faculty of 150 leading scientists and scholars, with a student body of 1500, most of whom have answered the call to arms. Physically, too, the Hebrew University has grown miraculously. Today it has nineteen buildings, with four faculties — Science, Medicine, Agriculture, and Humanities, including the Institute of Jewish Studies, the School of Oriental Studies, and a Department of Education.

The Hebrew University has benefited Palestine and the Near East almost from the day it was founded through its scientific research. It directed important investigation in the prevention, treatment and control of malaria, in reclamation of land, in exploiting the minerals of the Dead Sea, and in improving and preserving citrus fruits, Palestine's leading crop.

When England declared war against Nazi Germany, the Hebrew University geared its activities to the war effort. At the direct request of the High Command of the British Army in Egypt, the Hebrew University instantly arranged a special curriculum for medical officers of the Allied forces. These courses dealt with tropical and subtropical diseases, malaria and dysentery. Courses in war surgery, camp sanitation, and other field problems were organized by the Department of the University, in cooperation with the Hadassah University Hospital.

In addition, the Hebrew University's Meteorology Department prepared weather data for the British and Allied air forces which operated in the whole Near and Middle East, in the Caucasus, the Sudan, Ethiopia, and Eritrea. Its Department of Parasitology supplied antitetanus serum and typhus serum to the Army Medical Corps, while its Department of Oriental Studies furnished British intelligence service with interpreters familiar with all the languages and dialects of the neighborhood.

AMERICAN ORT FEDERATION

THE American ORT Federation is a branch of the World ORT Union which was founded in 1880 for the purpose of training Jewish men and women in skills both in industry and agriculture so that they could earn their own livelihood wherever they might find themselves.

ORT (Organization for Rehabilitation through Training) devotes itself solely to this one purpose, establishing training centres, cooperative workshops and farm colonies throughout Eastern and Central Europe. Thus, at the outbreak of World War II, ORT operated in Poland, Switzerland, France, Rumania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

When the Nazis overran Europe, ORT's work expanded to include those countries to which refugees flocked in great numbers. ORT institutions were established in South America, Central America, Cuba, Mexico, England, and — in the United States, New York City and the Refugee Camp in Oswego. ORT schools are as far away as Shanghai, China.

With the liberation of Europe, ORT Institutions are being reopened in every European country as soon as they are freed from the Nazi yoke.

The end of the war finds ORT stabilized in this hemisphere with the emphasis on rebuilding and expansion in Europe. To this end, the American ORT is doing its utmost not only to help finance such a program but is sending tools, machinery and equipment so that the process of rehabilitation may be accelerated.

Civic-Protective

JOINT DEFENSE APPEAL

THE Joint Defense Appeal is the link that couples two national organizations — the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith — in a unified defense program. Created in 1941 as an instrumentality for a combined fund-raising operation, the Joint Defense Appeal, through its Committee of Six that represents both the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League further serves as a coordinating agency for the actual programs of both agencies.

THE AMERICAN JEWISH COMMITTEE

THE American Jewish Committee was organized in 1906 to protect the civil and religious rights of Jews throughout the world. Through representations to various governments, the Committee has helped focus world attention on the catastrophe and implications of anti-Jewish oppression.

In the United States, the Committee conducts a far-reaching program employing all the media of public education to help awaken Americans to the universal danger of anti-Semitism. So effective were its nation-wide radio programs last year, that a special citation was awarded the American Jewish Committee by VARIETY.

Through its Community Service Unit, the Committee cooperates with local communities in the solution of their community relations problems. This is effected by visits of field consultants, as well as by continuous correspondence with almost 200 Jewish communities.

A Scientific Research department is engaged in organizing scientific and sociological thought to obtaining a deeper understanding of the causes of anti-Semitism and perfecting techniques for combatting it.

The Research Institute on Peace and Post-War Problems organized by the American Jewish Committee in November, 1940, is engaged in extensive studies of the problems facing Jews in the post-war era. A special Committee on Peace Problems recommended the creation by the World Security Organization of a permanent commission to formulate an international bill of rights embodying the principles of no discrimination between racial, religious and ethnic groups; the creation of a commission on statelessness for the purpose of normalizing the status of all persons displaced by the Nazi Fascist regime.

Based on these recommendations of the U. S. Delegation (at San Francisco) proposed, and the British, Russian and Chinese Delegations seconded, the establishment, under the jurisdiction of the social and economic council of the World Security Organization, of a Commission on Human Rights empowered to make recommendations for the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms all over the world. This proposal resulted from a petition presented by twenty-five of the official consultants to the U. S. Delegation, led by Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, president of the American Jewish Committee.

The Library of Jewish Information serves as a clearing house for inquiries on Jewish affairs. The Committee com-pires the AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK, a standard reference volume, and publishes the CONTEMPORARY JEWISH RECORD, an authoritative monthly, and the COMMITTEE REPORTER, a monthly news publication.

ANTI-DEFAMATION LEAGUE OF B'NAI B'RITH

THE Anti-Defamation League, a department of B'nai B'rith, was founded in 1913 and today is the oldest national Jewish civic protective agency at work in the field of combatting anti-Semitism and fostering pro-democratic attitudes.

The Anti-Defamation League fosters a broad educational program dedicated to these objectives: to eliminate defamation of the Jews and to counteract un-American and anti-democratic propaganda through a broad educational program; to advance good-will and proper understanding between American groups; and to preserve and to translate into greater effectiveness the ideals of American democracy.

The educational program of the League is implemented through its national headquarters, located in Chicago, and fourteen regional offices situated in strategic parts of the country, with the New England Regional Office located in Boston. This program utilizes all media of public information: the press, radio, lecture platform, advertising, visual education aids, and the printed word. In addition, specialized departments have been created to work in such fields as Intercultural Education, Community Service, Public Relations, Veterans' Affairs, Labor, Foreign Language Groups, Fact Finding, and Research. In the implementation of its program the League collaborates with many agencies both secular and religious engaged in all areas of activity and functioning on local and national levels. The League issues four monthly publications: The ADL Bulletin, The Washington News Letter, Bulletin of the Christian Friends of the Anti-Defamation League, and Trends in Trades.

The Anti-Defamation League, always prepared to meet the changing demands of the moment, has so constructed its educational program as to remain flexible and easily adjustable to rapid transitions. The League is now busily engaged in preparing to meet the domestic inter-religious and inter-racial problems of a post-war America.

THE AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS

THE American Jewish Congress was founded in 1917. Its chief purposes are to develop an informed public opinion on Jewish problems, and to combat anti-Semitism. Through the World Jewish Congress it cooperates in representing Jewish interests before governments and international bodies, for the restoration of Jewish rights, the rehabilitation of Jewish life, and the outlawing of anti-Semitism throughout the world. The American and the World Jewish Congress jointly maintain the Institute of Jewish Affairs, established in 1941 for research on the political and economic problems of Jewish post-war reconstruction.

One of the major projects is the combatting of unfair practices in the employment field, through its Commission on Economic Discrimination. A pioneer in its field, the Commission is now in its fifteenth year with branch offices in various cities.

Safeguarding civil and human rights, traditional in American democracy, is the work of its Commission on Law and Legislation.

In February, 1944, the American Jewish Congress established the Commission on Community Interrelations to undertake a scientifically structured program to determine real causes of inter-group tension and conflict and do something about overcoming such hostility. Under guidance of an eminent social scientist, a staff of specialists in "action research" make sampling studies involving specific cases of group conflict and, in cooperation with all possible agencies and individuals in a local community, seek to remove the hostilities.

JEWISH LABOR COMMITTEE

THE Jewish Labor Committee was organized in 1934. It comprises a number of trade unions, fraternal and other labor organizations, with a membership of about one-half million organized Jewish workers.

It fights to protect the civil, political and religious rights of the Jewish people throughout the world and enlists the support of organized labor in the struggle against anti-Semitism.

It cooperates with democratic organizations in Europe, supported the underground labor movement in countries during Nazi occupation, raises funds for labor organizations overseas, aids labor refugees and other victims of totalitarian persecution. It considers the struggle for the preservation and defense of Jewish rights an organic part of the general struggle of democracy and social advancement against the forces of reaction, Fascism and Nazism.

The JLC publishes LABOR REPORTS, a monthly Newsletter which reaches approximately 1500 AFL & CIO labor papers in the United States and Canada, as well as the VOICE OF THE UNCONQUERED, official organ of the JLC.

THE AMERICAN JEWISH CONFERENCE

THE American Jewish Conference was established at a gathering of representatives from national Jewish organizations, held in Pittsburgh January, 1943, where it was resolved to establish a democratically-elected body representing American-Jews to consider and recommend action on problems relating to the rights and status of Jews in the post-war world; on matters looking to the implementation of the rights of the Jewish people with respect to Palestine; and to elect a delegation to carry out the program in cooperation with accredited representatives of Jews throughout the world.

The American Jewish Conference became such a democratically-elected body, with a total of 502 delegates, 123 from national organizations and 379 from Jewish communities throughout the United States.

Two sessions of the American Jewish Conference have been held to date. An Interim Committee was created to implement the resolutions of the delegates. The Interim Committee established three Commissions on Rescue, Post-war, and Palestine which have worked with official American and United States agencies to carry out the program.

Following the second session, a Committee on United Jewish Representation was established for the presentation of Jewish demands to the United Nations at the international conferences called to work out the peace settlements.

The American Jewish Conference was given observer status at the San Francisco Conference and was asked to designate a consultant on Jewish problems to the American Delegation at that conference.

Education-Research

THE NATIONAL FARM SCHOOL

THE National Farm School, located at Farm School, Bucks County, Pennsylvania, is a school for scientific and practical agricultural education of young men. Founded nearly fifty years ago, the objective has been to provide city youth with a type of farm training that would enable them to engage in practical agricultural pursuits.

The School is open to needy and deserving candidates from all sections of the United States. Tuition is free. The course of instruction requires three full years. A program of alternating periods of classroom studies with periods devoted entirely to farm work enables boys with city backgrounds to get the "feel" of farming and secure a thorough training in the skills and science of agriculture. There are courses in dairying, poultry husbandry, field crops, farm machinery, vegetable and fruit growing, greenhouse management and landscape gardening.

For the duration of the war, the School has lowered its admission age to 15 years. Provision has also been made for the retraining of war casualties to fit them for agricultural work. A number of war veterans are already enrolled at the School.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR JEWISH EDUCATION

THE purposes of the American Association for Jewish Education, organized in 1939 as a national coordinating agency, are:

1. To foster and advance the cause of Jewish education as an expression of the spiritual and cultural aspects of Jewish life and as a contribution to the cultural and democratic traditions of America.
2. To organize and to intensify community effort and community responsibility for Jewish education.
3. To help establish bureaus of Jewish education where they do not exist and to coordinate on a country-wide basis the efforts of central agencies for Jewish education where they do exist.

JEWISH TELEGRAPHIC AGENCY

THE Jewish Telegraphic Agency is a world-wide press instrumentality, organized on a communal basis to provide impartial and speedy press information to the Jewish world community.

The JTA maintains an independent network of correspondents, offices and listening posts throughout the world and releases its bulletins in many different languages to suit the needs of regional press and communities. JTA also prepares special surveys and memoranda on developing Jewish situations for the guidance of Jewish institutions and leadership.

During this past year JTA was at times the only American press institution having correspondents in Russian-liberated Poland, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia. In addition JTA has sent correspondents into liberated portions of Germany, Poland, Belgium and Czechoslovakia.

THE B'NAI B'RITH WIDER SCOPE COMMITTEE IN 1945

THE B'nai B'rith Wider Scope Committee is a national American Jewish Youth Service Program of over twenty years standing. Jewish youth benefits from the Wider Scope program through organized activities, religious, cultural, social, interfaith, personal service and group vocational guidance. Rabbis and professional social workers are the directors of the program.

Wider Scope embraces the Hillel Foundations, reaching today approximately 50,000 college youths on 118 campuses; the B'nai B'rith Youth Organization is serving over 25,000 young people of high school and post-high school age in over 350 communities, and the B'nai B'rith Vocational Service Bureau is serving young people and adults with a program of group career guidance.

Specifically, its objectives are to serve Jewry by setting youth on the road to service their country and their community; by inculcating youth with ideals, habits and attitudes which make for dignified living as Americans and Jews; by preparing youth through study of Jewish life to play their part in the perpetuation of the survival values of the Jewish people; and by guiding youth into useful and satisfying careers.

THE DROPSIE COLLEGE FOR HEBREW AND COGNATE LEARNING

THE Dropsie College for Hebrew and Cognate Learning, located in Philadelphia, is a postgraduate college specializing in Biblical and rabbinical studies, in Jewish history, the Semitic languages, Assyriology, Jewish Philosophy and Hebrew Literature, and Comparative Religion.

Founded in 1905, the College offers the degree of Doctor of Philosophy and is open to all qualified students without distinction as to race, creed or sex. Graduates of the College occupy distinguished positions as professors in Jewish and non-Jewish academic institutions. These institutions include the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, various theological seminaries in this country, Jewish and Christian, and a number of the leading American Universities.

The Dropsie College has a library of over fifty thousand volumes into which have been incorporated many noted collections. It also publishes the JEWISH QUARTERLY REVIEW under the joint editorship of Doctor Abraham A. Neuman and Doctor Solomon Zeitlin.

Doctor Cyrus Adler was the first President of the College and served until his death in 1940, when he was succeeded by Doctor Abraham A. Neuman, noted scholar and historian.

THE MENORAH ASSOCIATION

THE Menorah Association, Inc., is the national organization of the Menorah Movement — “for the study and advancement of Jewish Culture and Ideals” — which originated at Harvard University in 1906. Ever since that year Menorah has been pioneering in educational activities and cultural achievements. Thus, it created the first intercollegiate organization of Jewish students in 1913; it established the first magazine of Jewish culture and art in America — THE MENORAH JOURNAL — in 1915; and it initiated summer schools for the training of student leaders.

In more recent years the Menorah Association has added two important developments to its program. With the coming to this country of refugee scholars, authors and artists from Europe, THE MENORAH JOURNAL enabled many of them to bring out their first work in America and helped to establish them in their new home.

More recently a Menorah Faculty Council, a body of leading Jewish professors of the country, was organized. Its purpose is to supervise the promotion of Jewish educational and cultural work among the students in colleges and universities.

JEWISH OCCUPATIONAL COUNCIL

THE Jewish Occupational Council is the central planning agency for economic adjustment service to the American Jewish community. The Council provides field service, research, publications, and coordination to all Jewish communities and national Jewish organizations engaged in vocational guidance, job placement, vocational training, and occupational research.

The Council's purposes are to study the Jewish economic problem, to promote the development of Jewish economic adjustment services, to strengthen the effectiveness of existing agencies, and to coordinate all programs in this field.

Its publications include the JEWISH OCCUPATIONAL BULLETIN, a PROGRAM AND INFORMATION SERVICE, as well as pamphlets and research studies of value to the field of Jewish occupational adjustment.

Currently the Council is concentrating to assist Jewish organizations in preparing for the post-war vocational adjustment and rehabilitation problems of veterans, youth, and civilian war workers.

CONFERENCE ON JEWISH RELATIONS

THE Conference on Jewish Relations is organized to promote a better understanding of the position of the Jews in the modern world through scientific study and research. Experts in the fields of economics, statistics, history, law and medicine, and other sciences are employed to conduct and supervise this research. A quarterly journal entitled "JEWISH SOCIAL STUDIES" is published.

Population studies sponsored jointly with local Jewish communities have been carried out in a number of cities. This census of American-Jewish communities contains essential, pertinent data regarding the occupations, nativity and age distribution of the Jewish population.

The Conference has also organized a commission of scholars and educators to assist in the reconstruction of Jewish cultural and educational institutions in Europe after the war.

THE YIDDISH SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTE — YIVO

THE Yiddish Scientific Institute — (Yivo) was founded in Vilna, Poland, in 1925. In 1940, because of the Nazi invasion of Poland, the headquarters of the Yivo were transferred to New York.

From its inception the Yivo has sought to serve primarily the Jewish public through its researches, publications, library and archives, school, lectures, and many other services. Its main purposes have been formulated as follows:

1. Documentation and recording — to collect and preserve materials pertaining to Jewish life, past and present, all over the world;

2. Analysis and research — to study past and present Jewish life with the methods of modern social science;

3. Training — to train a new generation of social scientists concerned with Jewish life and adequately equipped to study it.

Since 1925, the Yivo has published over 40,000 pages of research studies. It issues three periodicals: YIVO BLETER, devoted to papers in all fields of Jewish social research; YIDESHE SHPRAKH, concerning problems of standard Yiddish; NEWSLETTER OF THE YIVO (YEDIES FUN YIVO), an illustrated bulletin dealing with the work of the Yivo.

In 1945 Yivo issued a two-volume publication on the History of the Jewish Labor movement in the United States.

HISTADRUTH IVRITH OF AMERICA

(National Organization for Hebrew Culture)

THE Histadruth Ivrit of America, organized in 1916, is a national organization which has as its aims the promotion of the Hebrew language and literature; the fostering of Hebraic ideals; the defense of the place of Hebrew in Jewish education; the strengthening of the cultural relations between Eretz Israel and America, and the cooperation with other cultural and educational agencies in post-war reconstruction.

In furtherance of its aims, the Histadruth Ivrit has published for the last twenty-three years a weekly magazine "Hadoar." It also publishes "Sefer Hashanah" (a Hebrew Year Book) and several other publications for adults and children.

In cooperation with the Zionist Organization of America, the Histadruth Ivrit established the Hebrew Arts Committee which aims to transmit Jewish ideals and values through the arts; to express our distinctive Hebrew culture; to develop Jewish artists; and to build a home in America for the Hebrew Arts.

The Youth activities of the Histadruth Ivrit include "Haivri Hatzair," Hebrew clubs for children of school age, and the "Hanoar Hamitlamed" which conducts its activities among students in colleges, universities and seminaries.

The Histadruth Ivrit operates Camp "Massad," Hebrew summer camp for children.

BITZARON, meaning "stronghold," was founded in 1939 as a result of the destruction of Jewish centers of learning in Europe, so as to continue on this continent the tradition of Achad Haam's Hashiloach. The journal, edited by Professor Chaim Tchernowitz, serves as a higher organ of expression and as a means of support for foremost Hebrew scholars both here and abroad.

Over a hundred eminent writers have collaborated, many of them refugees from Berlin, Vienna, Budapest and Paris. Publishing only original material, BITZARON deals with the problems of both present and past history, with the science of Judaism, philosophy, criticism, literature and biography.

Strengthening Jewish Family Life

by DORA MARGOLIS, Executive Director
Jewish Family and Child Welfare Associations

Normal Family Living Is the Primary Aim of Jewish Social Service

WE have reached the half-century mark in organized Jewish philanthropy in our community. This occasion deserves both celebration and reflection. We are tempted, at this time, to glance backward in our history to review the development of services to families and children during these years. But only for a moment, because as Jews we are accustomed to view the past and present only in terms of the future. The importance of an historical perspective is to enable us to build a framework for the future of these agencies that will make for the well-being of Jewish family life. This implies a program geared to prevention and to the development of the individual to his utmost capacity. Family life, youth, and childhood are the primary concern of our Jewish agencies. This task brings us to the very threshold of daily living and imposes an obligation for a program that will make for the preservation of Jewish group existence.

As the panorama of these years unfolds, we see marching before us individuals fleeing persecution in Russia in 1881, and tragically repeated in this day as Jews leave Nazi Germany. War, unemployment, and a second world war encompass this span of years, and agency reports bear witness not only to the damaging effects of these crises on human beings, but also to the continued expansion of social services in this community to meet the needs of fellow Jews.

Family and children's service in Boston dates back to 1864. Historically, it is significant that it was the elders of a synagogue who initiated the first organized effort to take care of the distressed poor in Boston. Twenty-six men, assembled in Synagogue Adath Israel, laid the foundation for the Hebrew Benevolent Society which is the cornerstone of our present Jewish Family Welfare Association. The synagogue was the natural place to become the first relief agency, since it was the meeting place for the community.

Helping the less fortunate has always been traditional in Jewish life, and we find reference in the Bible to the corner crops and the gleanings of the fields which were left for the poor. The Code of Maimonedes offers further evidence of the kind of obligation taken by the Jewish group. This treatise embraces not only specific ways of helping people, but includes a philosophy in the art of helping, as expressed in the Seventh Code, which makes it impossible for the donor to know the recipient, and the recipient the donor, thus safeguarding the dignity of the individual. The Eighth Code has the ultimate aim of independence as the highest degree of helping, which enables the poor to become self-supporting either through loans for business or for employment. The elders of the synagogue were well-versed in these traditional responsibilities to their people, and included in their by-laws the purpose of the organization as giving temporary relief to the poor and needy.

In 1870, much hardship resulted from financial panic and unemployment. Valiant efforts were made to alleviate distress. Emergency relief was given. Food, medicine, and blankets were distributed. A dispensary for medical care for women and children was established. The work, however, extended beyond meeting emergency relief and medical care, as even then there was an interest in self-support. These were the days of the horse and team, and we find continued reference to loans for peddling, purchase of horses, and stands for newspapers. A free employment bureau was established, which also distributed tools and equipment for work. There was an eagerness to restore people to self-maintenance. To preserve the dignity of the individual, by outlining a method of giving, is inherent in Jewish life and part of our cultural heritage. Indeed, it has been the continuing thread in the development of modern case work and has its roots in the Code of Maimonedes.

During succeeding years, until 1918, there was little change in the work of the United Hebrew Benevolent Association. Additional relief agencies, such as ladies' aid societies, flourished and brought about a duplication of relief giving. In 1914, the Federation of Jewish Charities undertook a self-study and appointed a Welfare Committee to study all communal problems to bring about a better organized Jewish community. The recommendations had a profound effect upon the future structure of the family and children's agencies.

The primary recommendation suggested unification of all relief societies under the Federation and employment of professionally-trained people to carry on the work of these agencies. A new plan for serving the Jewish community was formulated, called the District Service Plan, to bring family welfare work closer to the whole stream of Jewish life. This new structure was based on the premise that the Federation had a responsibility for Jewish group existence. The very name itself, District Service, implies a decentralized type of service.

Centers were established in Roxbury, Dorchester, the South End, East Boston, and the West End. These district houses were virtually neighborhood houses located in the heart of the Jewish population. The plan was to have the social worker live in the heart of the neighborhood and become intimately acquainted with the problems of the people. She was to be concerned with all the welfare needs of the Jewish population in the district. Relief, health, recreation, and the cultural problems of the neighborhood were her concern. Clubs and recreational opportunities were organized for both children and adults. Representatives of the neighborhood were to govern the centers and were called the District Service Committee.

It was hoped that this participation in government and planning by district committees would bring about a democratization in philanthropy. Ten years of district service did not bring about a fulfillment of either of these two hopes. The social worker became aware of the problems of the district, but she could not hope to fulfill all the needs of the people. It was evident that health, recreation, and other specialized problems needed the help of the expert in these fields.

Responsibility of Social Worker

Experts in social welfare who reviewed the work of the AJP in 1930 recommended a greater development of these two programs. All the club work of the District House was turned over to the Hecht House and the YMHA, and family service became the sole responsibility of the social worker in the district house. Thus, family service came into its own and from then on until today there has been a constant development of expertness to meet these problems.

It was well, indeed, that the change in organization was made, since with the stock market crash in 1929 and the subsequent years of depression, the family agency was faced with an overwhelming tide of requests for financial help due to unemployment. We were now able to bring more skill to deal with the problem, born of experience and training. Vocational Service was established to provide specialized services for vocational guidance, job finding, and placement. Material needs of people were cared for, but the interest of the social worker was centered on the person himself.

Because of the vastness of the problem—12,000,000 were unemployed during the height of the depression—the public agencies carried the major responsibility for financial relief. The family agency, however, massed all its strength to help as many as possible.

It is a well-known fact that some people can carry burdens while others break down under them. It is this group to whom, it was felt, we had a responsibility to help. Many families who otherwise would have faced more serious breakdown were sustained. The development of the present Social Security program under our late President Roosevelt relieved private family agencies, such as the Jewish Family Welfare Association, of coping with the problem of economic distress. Now we became free, for the first time, to deal with those personal problems of human beings who needed help in coming to grips with life.

In 1936, the family agency assisted the first refugee from Nazi Germany. Continued mass persecution of European Jews brought many to this community who were given help in their adjustment to American life.

The years after the depression and those preceding the war increased work opportunities for people. Private and public agencies experienced a marked decrease in the number of people needing financial help. The value of case work was recognized in the community, as evidenced by the fact that people in the neighborhood came to District Offices with problems which prevented their living productive lives. More and more, troubled people requested this service, and, in fact, the proportion reached 50% in 1940. In other words, half the people who came to the Family agency no longer needed financial help, but were disturbed and troubled.

What problems did they bring to us? We all know them, as indeed they bear a familiar ring. "Sammy has temper tantrums, can't get along with other children, and I don't know what to do with him. I try to understand him and be patient, but it's no use." Or, Mr. . . . , "My wife and I no longer understand each other. When we were first married, we were really in love. Now she blames me because I am not successful. I make a living, but somehow it isn't good enough."

There is another story of the father who says, "It isn't that I can't find a job, but I can't hold it. I leave before they fire me, because I know that I'm no good. I always wanted to learn a trade, but never had the opportunity. My son is in school now, and he doesn't know what to do either. We're a funny family. My son has brains, but he can't make up his mind what to do, and even if he did, what good would it do? I haven't the money to send him to school." These problems in unending variation become the daily job of the social case worker. Her concern is the welfare of the individuals; her purpose the enrichment of family life.

Today, as in the old days, our goal is respect for the personality of the individual and a concern for his or her self-maintenance.

World events and the disintegrating effects of war on family life have loosened the moorings of individuals and families. Sons, fathers, and husbands have left their families to engage in the struggle for democracy. The influence of this on family life is clear. Adolescents and youths, upon whom we build our future hopes for a better world, have faced the greatest dangers. Some have been killed in the war, and those too young to serve have taken on responsibility beyond their years. Large earnings and new freedoms have not always been healthy influences for the development of manhood, and in some instances have led to delinquency.

Jewry's Responsibilities

The Jewish people face additional hardships in this changing world. They have relived the tragedies of their forefathers with the persecution of their brethren in Europe. The American Jewish community must take the responsibility for strengthening and revitalizing Jewish life.

We have already taken these measures in this community by planning for the post-war period. The Board of Directors of the Philanthropies is recommending a program of expansion and reorganization. A study of the agencies made by the boards and staffs gathered facts for coordinating and enriching the work of the agencies. The major change for the family and children's service will be a unification of these two agencies. At the same time, our services will be extended to the Metropolitan communities, as hitherto the by-laws of the Philanthropies limited us to Boston.

The survey of our local situation indicates a shift

New Happiness in a Foster Home of the Jewish population during the last ten years, which necessitates a relocation of our District Offices to bring them closer to the centers of Jewish population. In addition, two new District Offices will be opened, one to serve Brighton, Allston, and Brookline, and a second Mattapan.

Because of our concern for the future of youth and our interest in prevention, we plan to set up a Youth Center where parents and young people themselves can come for help before children get to the Courts. A Study Home, wherein all the medical and social service skills will combine to get a better understanding of so-called "problem children," is also planned.

Safeguarding Children's Health

In order to preserve the health of children, we have maintained summer camps. Country Week, organized in 1918, and Chebacco in 1929, were the only two available resources until the Women's Committee of the Jewish Child Welfare Association established Camp Eden to meet the demands for care for children. As a result of the survey of the Plan and Scope Committee, a new camp has just been purchased which will eventually enable AJP agencies to provide summer camp experiences for one thousand children.

These camps have as their sole purpose the continuation of the work done all year round by social workers already working with the families of these children. The program will be devoted not only to developing the physical health of children, but will also offer an educational program that will provide the link for deepening their knowledge of their own people through the medium of dance, music, song, arts and crafts, and dramatic activities.

The primary aim of a program of social service in any community is to preserve the family. There are always children, however, whose parents become ill or who are taken away by death and, therefore, need protection and care. The Boston Jewish community has been constantly alert to the needs of children who could not be cared for by their parents. Prior to the organization of the Hebrew Benevolent Society, Jewish orphan children were placed in non-Jewish institutions or in non-Jewish foster homes.

With the establishment of the Leopold Morse Home for the Aged, children were placed in this institution. It was soon recognized that although children were brought up in a Jewish environment it was certainly not ideal to have youth and the aged in the same institution.

From Institution to Foster Home

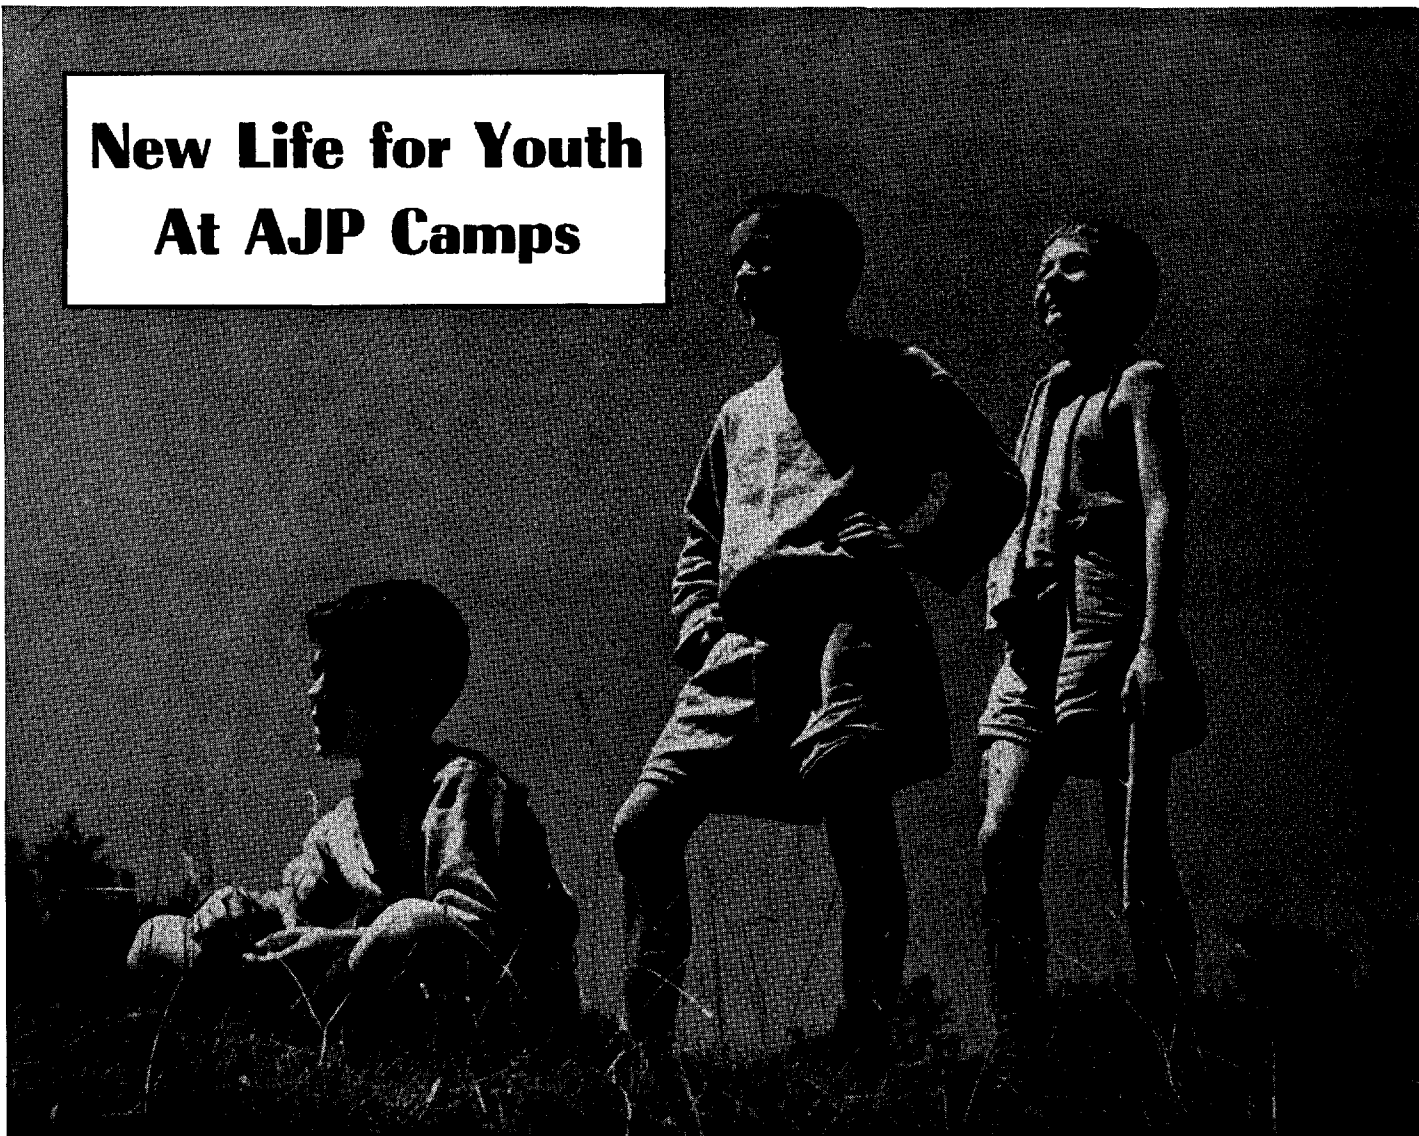

We find in the minutes of a Board of Directors' meeting in 1892 much discussion and endorsement of the plan to develop a foster home program. A special worker was engaged for the sole purpose of "finding suitable Jewish homes for children who had no parents or whose parents could not care for them." We are indebted to these men for their vision, for, indeed, they are virtually the godfathers of our present foster home plan for caring for children. There was no unanimous agreement in the community and they encountered much opposition, as the trend in those days was for institutional care. In 1901 the Helping Hand Home for Destitute Children was established.

This orphanage existed until 1911. A group in the community launched a movement to buy land and build an up-to-date child care institution, and finally established the Home for Jewish Children to care for and maintain "orphans and destitute children of Jewish faith whose parent or parents were unable for any cause to properly support them." One hundred and twelve children were transferred from the Leopold Morse Home and the Helping Hand temporary home which subsequently ceased to function as child care agencies. The new institution continued to be the sole agency offering children care outside their own homes until 1918.

The Welfare Committee of 1914 recommended the establishment of a children's bureau to develop a broader program for the care of children based on the principles of foster home care. It suggested a foster home program for Jewish children needing care away from their own home. Institutions should be used as a last resort and then for children needing only temporary care. The recommendations were accepted, and the Children's Bureau was established in 1918 and marked the beginning of the development of our present foster home program, with fewer children being referred to the institution.

A communal survey in 1930 recommended the closing of the institution and urged the adoption of the principles of the 1909 White House Conference on child care, which declared that for the normal child of a broken family, foster homes are the best substitute for the child's own home. This principle is in line with most progressive methods of child care. To develop such a program, the Jewish Child Welfare Association was organized and became the one agency in the Associated Jewish Philanthropies responsible for the continued development of services for children.

New Life for Youth At AJP Camps

Jewish Children Survey Ever-Widening Horizons Through AJP Summer Camp Experiences

AWAY from narrow, hot, hazardous city streets, freed from the confines of urban life — that is the chance every growing child needs in summer. The Jewish community of Boston has long recognized the necessity of setting up a summer camp program where children gain healthful, enriching experiences under competent and imaginative leadership.

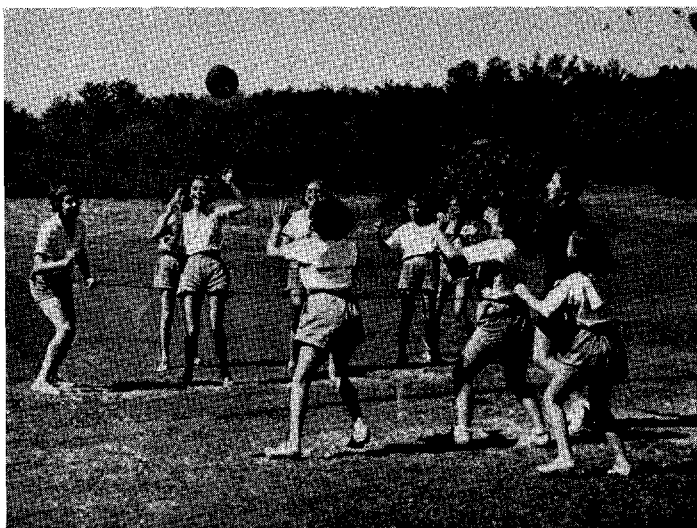

The camping program for the Jewish community was started as far back as the late nineties by that rare personality known to her contemporaries as “Aunt Lina” — the late Mrs Jacob H. Hecht, founder of the Hebrew Industrial School and Hecht House.

The major emphasis in the camping program sponsored by the agencies of the old Federation and the Associated Jewish Philanthropies has been on those children presenting special needs. Hundreds of children who attended the various camps were those who presented specific problems. They were children who had difficulty adjusting themselves to everyday life, children who were undernourished or underweight. In most instances they were boys and girls referred by the Jewish Family Welfare Association, the Jewish Child Welfare Association, and the Social Service Department of the Beth Israel Hospital.

Yet, each camper, regardless of the nature of his or her ailment, is enabled to lead a normal life at camp. Trained people direct a varied recreational program which runs the gamut from arts and crafts and swimming to dramatics and Jewish cultural lore.

“Country Week” was the camping program of that day, radiating from the Hebrew Industrial School. This camp was exactly what the name implies — one week’s vacation in the countryside for a group of Jewish children from sweltering city limits.

Supervised Athletics Are Part of Girls' Camp Program

The first camping site where Country Week Association conducted its annual program was in the Strawberry Hill section of Hull where the Association rented an eight-room house. The camp was directed by a housekeeper, with Association members summering in the district serving as overseers.

One of the most active workers for the Country Week Association from its inception was Mrs. Abraham K. Cohen, a present member of the board of trustees. She related that the Association then saw "that the mothers of these children needed vacations as much as did the children. We located a Jewish farmer in Lynnfield and he agreed to put up tents on his grounds, sufficient to take care, at one time, of twenty mothers and their babies, one baby only to each mother." This arrangement, Mrs. Cohen recalled, did not prove satisfactory, owing, mainly, to the lack of proper equipment and accommodations, and the work with mothers was abandoned.

Country Week acquired its first permanent home in 1917 through the generosity of Mrs. Edith S. Ratshesky and her husband, the late A. C. Ratshesky, who made available to the Association a luxurious estate in Montserrat, on the North Shore. Here, for the past twenty-eight years, the Country Week Association has been conducting a modern summer camping program for children, six to eleven years of age. However, instead of limiting the youngsters' stay in camp to one week, a common practice in Country Week's early existence, campers nowadays remain at Country Week from three to four weeks. In the course of one summer, about 130 children are accommodated at Country Week.

The second major camping venture was launched in 1929 when Camp Chebacco was opened. This camp, located along the shores of picturesque Lake Chebacco, in Essex, was also made possible by the Ratshesky Foundation. The entire camp, including the land and the buildings, became the property of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies after Mr. Ratshesky's death in 1943. It accommodates 210 children annually.

Vitality of Youth — That Old Leap Frog Dive

Because of the limited accommodations of both Country Week and Camp Chebacco, additional facilities were engaged by the Jewish Child Welfare Association in New Hampshire at Camp Eden, where 186 girls, ten to fourteen, receive care. A special camp for sickly children, eight to fourteen, has been conducted at Sharon but will soon be abandoned. Besides this additional resource, the Family and Child Welfare Associations place numerous children in other non-profit camps and in private homes. The entire camping program has received important and much-needed financial assistance from the Women's Committee of the Jewish Child Welfare Association.

Today, the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, through its Plans and Scope Committee's Sub-Committee on Camps, is reorganizing its entire camping program, integrating it with the year-round work of the various agencies that are members of the AJP. To achieve the desired integration and coordination so vital for the successful operation of a community camping program for children, additional properties have recently been acquired in Maine. This latest acquisition, supported in part by the previously mentioned Women's Committee, will enable the Associated Jewish Philanthropies to care for a total of 1,000 Jewish children through all its camps.

New Campaign Allies

by GEORGE ALPERT, Chairman

Metropolitan Division, 1944 Combined Jewish Appeal

SINCE the inauguration of the Combined Jewish Appeal to unify fund-raising efforts in Greater Boston for local, national, and overseas Jewish agencies, a number of Metropolitan communities have been included in the annual campaigns as the Metropolitan Division. At present this Division comprises twenty-eight communities whose contributions to the Combined Jewish Appeal go for overseas Jewish causes.

How important the Metropolitan Division has become in the successful conduct of the annual Combined Jewish Appeal may be seen by comparing a few figures. In the 1937 United Jewish Campaign, precursor of the Combined Appeal, the Metropolitan Division raised less than $10,000 — $8,672 to be exact. In the historic 1944 campaign, the same division contributed $250,000 to the drive. The number of contributors rose from 888 in 1937 to 6,903 in 1944. This phenomenal growth is indicative of growth in fund-raising organization and, equally important, of an increasing awareness and appreciation of Jewish needs on the part of the various Jewish communities.

At this time, the Metropolitan communities do not participate in meeting the financial needs of the AJP since the agencies of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies have always limited their activities primarily to the Jewish communities within the City of Boston. Except, however, for the financial considerations involved, as well as the availability of professional workers, there appears to be no sound reason for restricting these services to Boston limits. Surely, the cultural and social service, health and educational needs of the Jews in Roxbury and Dorchester, which are a part of Boston, do not differ materially from those in the suburban communities. It is planned, therefore, with the consent of the communities to extend AJP services with the cessation of war when conditions will be more favorable. It should be pointed out that services and agencies such as the Beth Israel Hospital, Bureau of Jewish Education, Hebrew Teachers College, etc., have for years been utilized by Metropolitan residents.

During the past year, a sub-committee of the Plans and Scope Committee of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies has given careful consideration to the entire matter of closer cooperation. It has recommended that a closer relationship between the Associated Jewish Philanthropies and the local communities be encouraged through closer cooperation with regards to allocations for local needs, and to community planning through conferences and discussions on modern approaches to social service and cultural problems. In one community, for example, a trend toward closer working relationships has already begun to take form.

In the meantime, the cooperative fund-raising activities through the Combined Jewish Appeal will continue. During these extremely troublesome years, as the needs of our overseas agencies have taken on ever-increasing proportions, the funds raised in the Metropolitan communities have kept pace with those needs. The totals reached by the Metropolitan Division in each campaign are a great tribute to the local chairmen and campaign committees and to the many local contributors who have so magnificently supported their local leadership.

This year we, who are fortunate enough to be American Jews, are faced with the unprecedented emergency needs of more than a million liberated but woefully helpless Jews in Europe. The program of their rehabilitation calls for vast sums greatly in excess of those heretofore required for use on the Continent and Palestine. In the light of the proven record of the Metropolitan Division during the past eight years, we can have the fullest assurance and confidence that the communities constituting the Metropolitan Division will each do their part in fully meeting these requirements.

Woman's Role In Communal Affairs

by MRS. GEORGE KAHN, Chairman
Women's Division

PARALLEL with the increasing participation of women in business, industrial, educational, and other fields, has been their acceptance of increasing responsibility in the philanthropic area. And parallel with the growth of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies has been the development of the Women's Division, one of the few such groups of its size in the country operating on a completely volunteer basis.

Organized in 1917 around a nucleus of approximately one hundred workers, the Women's Division reveals a notable history, both in social services agencies and in fund-raising for the Associated Jewish Philanthropies.

Through the efforts of the Women's Division, much of the education of the community to the pressing need for organized social service has been accomplished. An awareness of the essential demands upon the community by our local institutions and by the recently multiplying national and overseas institutions has made this division the focal point for dissemination of information to the public concerning these needs.

The Women's Division has been, in a large measure, the instrument by which new concepts and approaches to social problems have been successfully introduced and expanded in Boston.

In 1917, the Women's Division set themselves a goal of $20,000 for the Federated Jewish Charities, the first campaign of any magnitude in Boston. Their districts of collection included Allston, Back Bay, Brighton, Brookline, Dorchester. Their pioneer efforts helped raise $24,384 from 2,229 contributors. Reorganized in 1930 to solicit contributions exclusively from women, the Women's Division secured $48,000 from about 3,500 contributors.

From this promising beginning, grew the present organization of 1,300 workers, who carry on an education program as well as fund-raising. The Women's Division shattered all of its existing records in 1944 by raising $115,000, representing 9,312 contributions.

The strength of the Women's Division may be found in the loyalty and devotion of those women responsible for its inception, whose inspired service has been an incentive to all who have followed to build firmly on the foundation they laid.

Training Leaders for Tomorrow

by AARON LEVINE, President
Junior Division

FROM its beginning early in the 1930's, the Junior Division aimed at fostering educational, philanthropic, and social programs among the younger people of the community. In these early years, there were two groups: the Dorchester Group, comprising Dorchester, Mattapan, and Roxbury; and the Brookline Group, including Brookline, Newton, and Allston.

These groups assisted the Associated Jewish Philanthropies in its work by carrying on active fund-raising campaigns for the United Jewish Appeal and the AJP among the youth of the communities. Each group also participated in other activities, such as forums and social and educational gatherings — all instituted to promote increased interest in various community services.

In 1939, a significant milestone was reached when the two groups merged to form the AJP Juniors, the Junior Division, in order to unify further their programs. Embarking on a year-round program designed to reach every young Jewish person of Greater Boston, the Junior Division opened membership to all contributors to the Combined Appeal.

After 1939, there was a great expansion of the JD: the rolls of contributors rose to five thousand; the year-round program was in full swing with Pleasure Eve, the outstanding social and educational event of the year, forums, and fund-raising drives that increased yearly in scope. Most important, however, was the mounting enthusiasm developing within the Division.

The year 1944-45 has witnessed a resurgence of Division strength after the war-time depletion of the group. Many new workers have been enrolled in the organization, auguring well for JD's future. The 1944 drive was the best in the Junior's history.

As one of the sponsoring agents in the canvass for the Jewish Welfare Board War Records Drive, the Junior Division provided more than 1,500 workers, who gave a fine demonstration of team-work in this complex task.

The past decade has seen many junior leaders step into senior ranks, performing important functions. There is little doubt that the JD will keep on serving as a training ground for future leaders.

Boston, Patriarch of Federations In the United States

by SIDNEY HOLLANDER, President

Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, Inc.

THE measure of the wisdom of the men who founded the Associated Jewish Philanthropies of Boston fifty years ago is attested to not only by the multitude of services it has rendered to Boston, but also by the fact that the pattern has been followed in hundreds of communities throughout the United States and Canada.

Boston is the Patriarch of Jewish Federations in America. At the same time, it is exhibiting a youthful vigor and an adaptability which is reflected in many ways, such as the superb fund-raising achievements of your Combined Jewish Appeal, your new program of youth services, the capital financing of your hospitals and other agencies, and the recent formation of your Jewish Community Council. Clearly Boston is not resting on its laurels.

And it is essential that this movement continue. For now, more than ever, we must mobilize all the strength we have for new tasks in Boston and elsewhere. Times have changed greatly since your federation came into existence. The world is far different. The Jewish communities are different, too.

Some of the problems which were paramount fifty years ago seem of minor importance now. Other responsibilities formerly carried alone are now being met through public welfare and social security. As a result of both world events and governmental action, our Jewish community organizations are no longer concerned solely or even primarily with the dependent and neglected in our population. Now our major concern is the problems and needs which we all share.

With this in mind, we are giving our attention more and more to community planning for Jewish educational, cultural, and recreational needs, development of sound community relations, the prevention—rather than the patching up—of social problems, the relationship of our local Jewish communities to national Jewish affairs, and beyond that, our relationships to political as well as philanthropic developments affecting Jews overseas.

Within the traditional philanthropies, there is also a shift of emphasis. As the general population ages, we are giving more attention to the needs of the aged and chronic sick. We are also finding that the core of the Federation concept — that all types of services are interrelated parts of a single organic whole — is now more valid than ever, and that the only hope for any effective approach to these problems is through central planning and coordination for all agencies, backed by central financing to make that planning effective.

The strength which our Federations, Welfare Funds, and Community Councils have developed during the past few decades is sorely needed now. This generation faces the biggest job which has ever confronted our people. We need all the wisdom, courage, and imagination we can muster.

I am confident that we can look to Boston's Jewish community and to the Associated Jewish Philanthropies for continued leadership in abundant measure.

The Coming REVOLUTION in Advertising

ADVERTISING is a part of the machinery of distribution. Its function is to tell people about products as persuasively as possible and where to buy them.

The where-to-buy is distribution.

Distribution is today undergoing a major overhauling — a literal revolution — in preparation for the single great post-war problem of reducing the cost of selling.

No clairvoyance or gift of prophecy is required to see what is happening. Retail buying syndicates, chains, cooperatives, vertical mergers are expanding dramatically under the obvious necessity for low-cost distribution.

This revolution must affect the very foundation of advertising in all its phases.

No advertising organization can understand this revolution, let alone do something about it, unless a realistic understanding of the process of distribution is part of its very marrow.

We have not only regarded the science of distribution as an essential prelude to successful promotion — we have been part of it — and, in some industries, we have actually taken leadership and helped to formulate new distributional concepts which today are accepted as if they had always existed.

We believe our approach to distribution is partly based on our long and unique experience with retail problems where the “blue sky” of national advertising is replaced by the “brown earth” of day-to-day and face-to-face contact with consumers, on the retail level.

Manufacturers who sense and see the new order of things in the vital matter of modern distribution, may find much of interest in what we have to say on the subject.

"We must work to bind up the wounds of a suffering world . . . to build an abiding peace, a peace rooted in justice and in law.
We can build such a peace only by hard, toilsome, painstaking work . . . by understanding and working with our allies in peace as we have in war."

Ever Been WOUNDED?

Not a pretty thought, is it? And yet it is happening to our fighting men every day in uncounted villages . . . towns . . . islands . . . on ships . . . in planes . . . everywhere throughout the far-flung Pacific area.

Remember, too, that hospitals in Europe as well as in the United States are filled with wounded American soldiers whose lives depend upon your blood.

DONATE BLOOD NOW AND AS OFTEN

IN THIS — Our Anniversary Year

For 25 years Curtains by Modern have been an assurance of the best in quality, style and workmanship. During this quarter century, we have passed through many business crises — similar to the present period — but we have never lowered our standards. Our gift to you this, our anniversary year, is our continued promise to maintain the high standards of Curtains by Modern, with a sincere hope that this year will see the successful conclusion of the war, so that all our boys and girls may soon be home again.

OUR FAMOUS

“Winsome Lady”

Full fashioned 45 and 51 gauge as well as tailored-to-fit lace hosiery is still on a restricted output basis.

We regret that we are unable at present to accept any new wholesalers, chain stores or large retailers. When materials become more plentiful and full production is renewed, we shall be more than pleased to serve our many new friends.

- ★ Serving the shoe industry for more than half a century with sole leathers and cut soles.
- ★ At this time we are proud to supply the Army . . . the Navy . . . and the Marines with leather soles.
- ★ When our efforts for the armed forces shall be completed, we will again be pleased to devote our full production to civilian requirements.

*In All the World
There Is No Value Like*

U. S. WAR BONDS

Every good American citizen will see a good part of his American dollars are put into WAR BONDS. The best possible value not only as a good American investment but also as a guarantee of the ideals and objectives we all expect to enjoy in the post-war world.

The Dead Will Not Sleep

by HOWARD FAST

Author of "Freedom Road"

THERE was never a time like this; in all the history of mankind, in all the thousands of years he has walked upon the earth, there was never a time like this.

There was never so much violent death, so much suffering, so much hideous cruelty; and there was never so much hope.

There was never a time before when men of good will of every nation stood shoulder to shoulder; when men of every color and every creed and every race stood side by side with their faces and their arms set against the powers of darkness.

There was never a time before when the aim and end of a struggle was so clearly indicated, so proudly indicated; not the victory of this nation or that nation, not the freedom of this people or that people, but the liberation of a whole world, the brotherhood of all mankind.

There was never a time before when such armies marched, all under the same banner, black men and white men, yellow men and brown, Christian and Jew and Moslem and Buddhist.

There was never a time before when a struggle belonged so completely to the people, to the child slain by a Nazi bomb, to the priest crucified by the Gestapo, to the woman defiled by the Hitler gangsters, to all the innocent, tortured, and slain by the thousands.

There was never a time before when we knew our enemies so well, saw them so clearly, understood the evil they stood for and the suffering they wrought; when we faced the defeatists among us so angrily and stripped them so naked in their miserable shame.

There was never a time before when the free people of this earth put such faith in their leaders, knowing that they were led by men who had been given their mandate by the people, who were trusted by the people, and who did the people's will.

There was never a time before when, during a struggle, the future defined itself so clearly and hopefully; a promise that is not for one nation but for all nations; a promise of peace for many generations; a promise of freedom for all the oppressed, freedom from fear, from hunger, freedom of speech, and freedom of religion.

No, there was never such a time as this before. And if we fail now, there may never be such a time as this again — if we listen to the voices of defeat, to those who would divide us, to those who would calumniate our allies, to those who say, "A little less, a little more slowly."

This is a time for more, not for less. This is a time for the last terrible effort, for the blow that will strike down the fascist beast forever. This is a time for one more pint of blood, one more bond, one more hour of work. This is the moment for which mankind has waited since first he turned his face toward God.

If we fail now, the dead will not sleep, and the ground they wet with their blood will never be ours. If we fail now, the future will never forgive us. There is only one thing the dead ask — that they shall not have died in vain.

FOUR FREEDOMS

- ★ FREEDOM OF SPEECH
- ★ FREEDOM FROM FEAR
- ★ FREEDOM FROM WANT
- ★ FREEDOM OF RELIGION

Where but in America can we know the full flavor of their meaning? The Four Freedoms are more than something to talk about . . . to hope for. They must be a reality . . . and we can all make them a reality by our unstinting purchase of WAR BONDS. And keep on buying WAR BONDS with every available dollar — to the limit of your ability.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

50 Years of Friendly Service

The UNITED STATES TRUST COMPANY began to do business on March 4, 1895. On this Golden Anniversary we thank all those people and companies who have helped us to success.

We are grateful to our loyal customers, old and new. With them we have grown; to them we bring the fruits of our experience through war and peace, depression and prosperity.

We enter our second half-century confident that we can render constructive financial advice and complete banking service to business and individuals.

Colonial

for the BEST patent leather shoes

By virtue of giving the manufacturer better leather, foot for foot and cent for cent... the retailer better quality... the wearer better value... Colonial has long been the world's largest selling patent leather. This was true before the war... is true today... will be true after the war when more adequate supplies will be available.

SOLE SPLITS

Colonial Sole Splits, both natural and factory finished, are favorites with a great many makers of casuals, infants', and women's street and dress shoes because . . . they are flexible for comfort . . . chrome tanned for durability . . . economical for cutting . . . and, because they are leather . . . and available. If you are not specifying, or using, Colonial Sole Splits, we will gladly send samples so that you can see how easily and satisfactorily they solve the sole leather problem.

How To Keep A Heart Beating

It's very simple.

Lie on a cot. A nurse will sterilize your arm at the elbow, inject a drop of novocain so that you won't feel the introduction of a needle. Now rest comfortably while the blood slowly flows through a tube to a jar . . . relax a few more minutes.

There! You have given the American Red Cross a pint of blood . . . and are on your way inspired, uplifted. Simple, wasn't it?

Yet the short and pleasant time you spent, the little blood you gave, will give some wounded soldier's heart new strength to beat. You will have saved a life.

Don't turn away. Many hearts now need new beats. Make your appointment to save a life—TODAY!

Protective Packaging Products offer

Safer and Modern POST-WAR PACKAGING

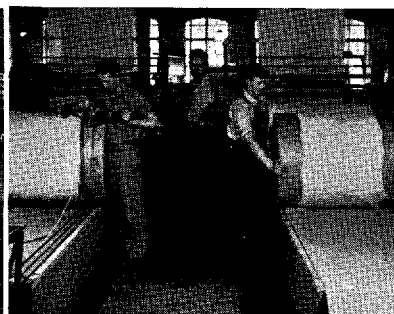

These wartime papers have offered safer protection against extreme shipping hazards and against excessive moisture and corrosion. They will serve equally as well in peace-time packaging. The small cost is invariably eliminated in comparison with the large savings they produce.

Cushion Sleeves
for Speedy Packing

Electronic Wrap
for Fragile Products

Textile Wrap
for Heavy Rolls

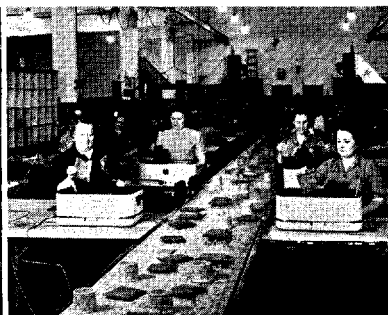

Corroflex "Cartons
in Roll Form"

Corroflex, the Sherman flexible-cushion wrap is famous for its many savings in time, materials, shipping cube, weight and money. Users have reported savings up to 50%! Often called "Cartons in Roll Form," Corroflex can be used in place of cartons, boxes, crates, burlap, corrugated and wrapping paper, and inner wrapping materials such as excelsior and shredded paper. This highly efficient packing material replaces many materials — a single, speedy packing operation eliminates multiple operations. It is the ideal way to pack your products — better, faster and more economically!

Greaseproof and Anti-Corrosive Papers

Waxed Non-Corrosive
Ordnance Papers

Corroflex Kraft and Waterproof Cushion Wrap

Laminated Paper
and Plastic Wraps

Sherman protective materials also include many for the safer packaging of metal products. There is a wide range of types and weights, each to meet rigid government specifications. All are greaseproof, non-corrosive and acid-free. Some are also waterproof, while others are oil inhibiting combinations of paper with new types of resins and plastic films. A few of the almost countless uses for Sherman protective products are shown here. Others are presented in the nationally used "Speed-Packing Manual." If you use packaging materials, this valuable manual can help you to save in many ways. A copy will be gladly sent you, without cost or obligation.

“WITH malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation’s wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan . . . to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.”

During wartime, a festive celebration is not a fitting procedure, but still we can quietly feel proud of our fifty years of paper service. Today we are the largest paper products manufacturing and distributing plant in New England.

From one 50-year organization to another, we salute the Combined Jewish Appeal for its magnificent work over the past half century. May it continue to grow for the sake of humanity.

Patent-Glo

hand-japanned fabric*

Since its introduction, Patent-Glo has grown rapidly in popularity as, one after another, handbag manufacturers have discovered how satisfactorily it works and serves. Practically indistinguishable from patent leather in surface appearance, Patent-Glo is being used extensively wherever patent leather has been used . . . handbags . . . footwear . . . belts . . . and other fashion accessories. With a beautiful, brilliant surface, hand-japanned exactly as are the better grades of patent leather, Patent-Glo is available in a wider variety of colors .

The Light That Never Fails . . .

We like to think of charity in much the same way as we think of a glorious sunrise in the morning. We know that no matter how dark the night; regardless of the clouds that gather, the glory of the Heavens will return; to warm, to reawaken and bring new sunny hope to all.

And so it is with charity and its works. Charity, like the sun, is never lost. It may be hidden behind the clouds of ingratitude or misunderstanding, yet it ever does a work of beauty and grace upon the hearts of those who give. So let us remember, that the place of charity — like that of godly sunshine is everywhere.

"As we move resolutely to extend the frontiers of social progress, we must be guided by practical reason and not by barren formulae. We must ever bear in mind that our objective is to improve and not to impair the standard of living of those who are now undernourished, poorly clad and ill-fed."

IN making your will, may we strongly urge you to designate the Associated Jewish Philanthropies as one of your beneficiaries. Property or funds bequeathed to the Associated Jewish Philanthropies are effectively and efficiently administered by a group of leaders in whose ability the community has the highest confidence.

Donors may make their bequests without restrictions as to use, in which event the funds would be devoted to any of the purposes of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies. At their option, however, donors may derive the additional satisfaction of designating the precise way in which bequests are to be used. They may set up either a trust during their lifetime, a trust in their will, or make an outright gift in their will, and in this way know that their desires will always be executed in the most minute detail.

FORMS OF BEQUESTS

GENERAL BEQUESTS IN UNRESTRICTED LEGACY

"I give and bequeath the sum of.....dollars to the ASSOCIATED JEWISH PHILANTHROPIES, INC., a corporation duly organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

PERMANENT ENDOWMENT FUND

"I give and bequeath the sum of.....dollars to the ASSOCIATED JEWISH PHILANTHROPIES, INC., a corporation duly organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to be held in trust by it, and the income only thereof to be used for the purpose of the said Associated Jewish Philanthropies."

CONTINGENT ENDOWMENT FUND*

"I give and bequeath the sum of.....dollars to the ASSOCIATED JEWISH PHILANTHROPIES, INC., a corporation duly organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to be held in trust by it, and the income only thereof to be used for the purposes of the said Associated Jewish Philanthropies of Boston; provided, however, that if any contingencies arise, which in the discretion of the Board of Managers of Trust Property of said trustee renders it necessary or advisable to use the principal, or any part thereof, at any time or from time to time for the corporate purposes of said trustees, such principal or part thereof may be so used."

* — This form of bequest leaves the money available for use as future necessities may arise. No one can foresee all contingencies. It is urged that discretion be left to the Board of Managers of Trust Property that may be in office at any critical time. It should be noted, however, that no Board to date has encroached upon the principal of any endowment or bequest, even though empowered to do so and that only the income of those bequests has been applied for the current purposes of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies.

FORM FOR CHARITABLE TRUST

To the Board of Managers of Trust Property of Associated Jewish Philanthropies, Inc., of Boston, Massachusetts

We hand you herewith check for $..... upon the following trusts and conditions: —

1. Said sum and such additional sums as we may deliver to you for the same purpose shall be held by you under the designation of the ".....Fund" and invested and reinvested by you and the income and principal thereof applied as follows:

2. The income from time to time accruing shall be paid over to the said Associated Jewish Philanthropies, Inc. and specifically credited by it as having been received as income from said.....Fund, said income to be used by said Associated Jewish Philanthropies, Inc. as part of its General Income for charitable and philanthropic purposes as may from time to time be determined by its officers or representatives.

3. No part of the principal of said.....Fund shall be so paid over, during the lifetime of..... except with his assent in writing, and thereafter you are authorized to use at any time or times the same proportion of the principal of saidFund as the proportion that you then use of the principal of all other unrestricted trust funds under your control.

Yours very truly,

Quality

WE INSIST ON IT . . . SO YOU CAN DEPEND ON IT

You can't depend on the quantity of foods obtainable today. So you must depend on the QUALITY.

For better QUALITY can make less food go farther. It is the best way for you to give your family the nourishment they require.

We at Stop & Shop can do nothing about point values and ceiling prices. Standards of weight and measure are fixed by law. But QUALITY is one thing we can and do control. It is within our power to insist on QUALITY and we do. That's the Stop & Shop way — to give you the maximum nourishment that only foods of fine QUALITY can offer.

A SUPPLEMENT PUBLISHED BY THE 1945 COMBINED SERVICES

We are proud to publish the Honor Roll of the Greater Boston Jewish men and women in the armed forces of the United States. This historic record of Greater Boston Jewry's contribution to the services of our nation was made possible by the Jewish Welfare Board War Records Committee. Every effort has been made to insure the correct spelling of all names, and we deeply regret any inaccuracies and omissions. Should any appear, please send the correct information to the JWB War Records office, Room 410, Park Square Building, Boston. Names published are as of June 15, 1945. — The Editor.

In Appreciation

We believe this 50th Anniversary Year Book to be the finest our community has yet produced and a publication which, like our first Federation in 1895, may well serve as a model for other Jewish communities.

But for the vision and labors of one man, this historic project could not have been achieved. The community, as well as the officials of the Combined Jewish Appeal and of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, owe a debt of gratitude to LOUIS H. SALVAGE, General Chairman of the 1944 and 1945 Combined Jewish Appeal. He foresaw the income potentialities of such an undertaking and by his zealous campaigning, he and his committee secured the advertisements which not only defrayed the cost of this publication, but added a substantial sum to the Combined Appeal fund.

The writer is also indebted to SIDNEY S. COHEN, executive director of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies; ISRAEL FRIEDLANDER, adviser; DAVID GELLER, editor; JOSEPH GREENBAUM, president of the Court Square Press, Inc., publishers of the Year Book; RUBY NEWMAN, production manager of the Hirshon-Garfield Advertising Agency; and ISAAC SELIGSON, adviser, assistant director of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies.

GABRIEL M. STERN, General Chairman,
Anniversary Year Book Committee

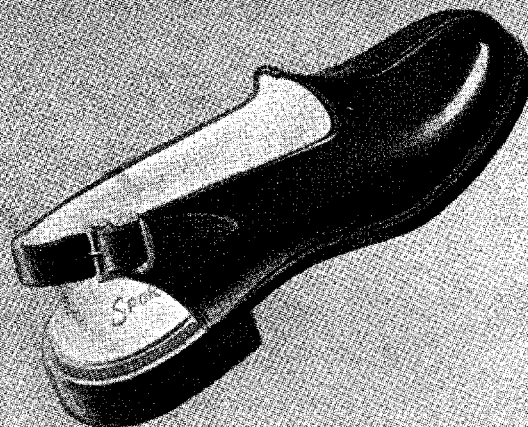

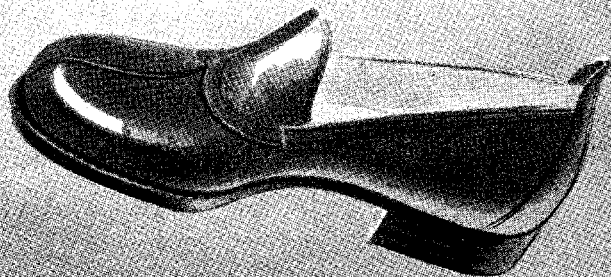

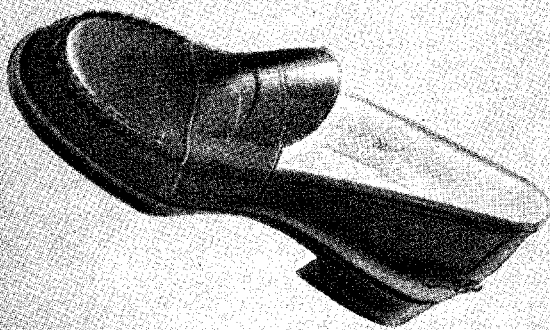

October 14 - November 1
